'Quit thinking disabled. Disabled is in your mind," says Carmel Valley's Colleen Sweet, a wheelchair road racer. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Wheelchair road racing: How Sweet it is!

Polio fails to deter this athlete

By MICHAEL GARDNER

("Athlete: One trained to engage or compete in exercises, games and contests requiring physical strength, endurance, agility, speed, ect." — Webster's.)

EACH WEEK Colleen Sweet follows a strenuous workout regimen of pumping iron, swimming, aerobics and road racing.

Never mind the fact that polio has rendered Sweet's legs practically useless — she is an athlete.

"My heart beats a runner's beat," Sweet says as she lifts the especially-designed $1,300 wheelchair from the bed of a pick-up truck near Carmel Valley Road where she can often be seen wheeling along with her husband of nine years, Randy, jogging by her side.

"Before, he would leave me to go do a workout and I'd feel real left out," Sweet explains of Randy's training for marathons.

Now Sweet, who lives in Carmel Valley, is doing her own training for her own marathons at the age of 36.

Sweet is fresh from competing in the Lilac Bloomsday Race in Spokane, Wash. where she won $250 thanks to a fifth-place finish in the women's wheelchair division.

Like many marathons and 10K races, the organizers in Spokane have a special division for wheelchairs, usually giving them a few-minute head start to avoid any danger of an accident.

Sweet has nothing but praise for the Lilac Bloomsday race, one of the first to award prize money to wheelchair racers. "They're more and more taking us seriously like we take ourselves seriously...Spokane is behind that race like none I've ever seen," she said.

Sweet's plans for further competition this summer on the "Invacare Cup" summer circuit — which provides prize money and points much like auto racing and tennis — was sidetracked when she had to send her wheelchair away for special tires and couldn't train for nearly a month.

Her next race will be in the upcoming San Francisco Marathon on July 20. "I love hills,'" she laughs.

But the cost of following the wheelchair circuit is no laughing matter. Plane fare, hotel bills and time off from her busy job as office manager of the Monterey Baking Co. all add up and subtract from the checkbook.

Sweet hopes to locate a corporate sponsor; someone who will finance the trips in return for publicity and field work. "I want to work for them too. I don't want a free ride," she said.

To build a reputation, Sweet also will compete in road races in Washington, Arizona and Long Beach before the year ends.

•

IN ANY sport there are the heroes. There's Larry Bird in basketball, Joe Montana in football and Reggie Jackson in baseball.

Who hasn't lain awake at night dreaming of competing alongside or against their heroes at their top level?

Sweet is no different; her hero is Candace Cable-Brooks of San Luis Obispo, generally considered the top woman wheelchair racer in the country.

"To think, I'm racing alongside Candace elbow to elbow," Sweet says whimsically when talking about improving her times. "But I'm not ready just yet — next year," she adds realistically.

Sweet got her start in wheelchair racing "on a lark" — before that she mostly exercised by swimming.

"Just for a lark a friend gave me his racing wheelchair and told me to enter," she explained.

Taking umbrage

Dear Editor:
TO: Mayor Eastwood and members of the Carmel City Council

To ignore the events of the past few weeks regarding the city council's dismissal of three planning commissioners would be as irresponsible as the action itself. There are those who will label me a "poor loser" or suggest that I am looking for some vindication. Would that it were that simple. Let me state unequivocally that I do not take issue with what you did, but I do, indeed, take umbrage with the way it was done.

My concerns center on the following:

1. The decision was made prior to the council meeting of June 3. (See Pine Cone May 29). The Brown Act may not have been broken, but undeniably bent.

2. Not one of the commissioners were given a call advising them of their dismissal.

3. In the almost 10 years I have been on the commission, neither (Bob) Fischer nor (Elinor) Laiolo have ever attended a meeting!

To quote from the brochure you handed out in the recent election, Mr. Mayor, "I want our City Government to work with the people, not sit in judgment." A question for you, Mr. Mayor: Did you not sit in judgment of me?

And another quote from the same brochure: "I think elected officials are going to be judged on their ability to make the most of local resources, their ability to bring people together, not their ability to cause strife and controversy." Are you really so naive that you do not know what controversy this has caused?

You are riding the crest of an enormous wave, an overwhelming mandate by the good people of Carmel, but you have taken the first step in betraying your victory. You played the leading role in this unprecedented action and displayed formidable determination to prevail regardless of who was hurt or how it was done. You have sent out a signal; I wish it were just a puff of smoke, but I fear that under that puff of smoke is a raging bonfire.

To Councilwoman Laiolo I ask, as a retired school administrator and public relations person, how can you possibly justify your actions?

I quote from your "Candidate Statement": "My policy is to represent the people of Carmel-by-the-Sea. This is your City, and I want to carry out the wishes and desires of the people. I am in this campaign to see that the City is given back to the people and that they have a voice on all issues that may come before the City Council."

More campaign rhetoric — how could the people possibly have a voice in this decision when the decision was made BEFORE the council meeting? As a retired school administrator myself, I am trying to find a rational way to analyze and understand your behavior, but the rationale eludes me. This leads me to inevitably question your awareness, self-responsibility and genuineness.

You, too, Mrs. Laiolo, became an "instant winner," however, winners have different potential; achievement is one, but not the most important — authenticity and integrity are. You chose to ignore the worth, well-being and dignity of the people involved.

And Councilman Fischer, may I quote from your Candidate Statement?

"I am saddened by the lack of direction, fiscal irresponsibility, secrecy, and the disharmony and poor public image created by the current council." Secrecy, disharmony and poor public image are the key words in that statement. A scant two months in office, and already you have violated your own words.

And so, with one year left of my four-year term, having just been elected chairman unanimously by my peers, and with 10 years of service on the planning commission — in less than five minutes it was over. Sounds more like a Grade B shoot-'em-up movie than a Carmel City Council meeting.

Because of my deep and abiding love for Carmel, I wish you good luck and success, but ask that the three of you think twice before putting any more heads on the chopping block, as you did mine.

Judicial system reforms

Dear Editor:

Our judicial system is supposed to protect our constitutional right to represent ourselves in court, but the truth is, that it is impossible for most Americans to complete the complicated filing procedures to bring their case to a court trial.

This makes the courts not available to the common American who is not a lawyer and the attorney fees involved with protecting our rights make it impossible to really protect our rights. In other words, the courts are failing to protect most of our constitutional rights just because of the complicated filing procedures that even the clerks don't understand.

The filing procedures are so complicated that even the lawyers lose many of their cases due to technicalities that have nothing to do with justice. The American Civil Liberties Union, a lawyers' union, has not done anything to protect our constitutional right to self-representation and the reason for their passiveness is obvious. They want more money, which is more important to them than our rights as Americans.

We need reforms in our judicial system which will restore our right to represent ourselves in court. Self-representation in court is a constitutional right and this should not be treated like some product that is allocated to us by the merchants of Venice. The courtroom is not a marketplace, and yet it has become the center of many commercial interests. We need reforms in our judicial system, and we need them today.

'Poor losers'

Dear Editor:

History documents factionalism in all societies, except during periods of catastrophe, including war. But the little old ladies of Carmel persistently refuse to recognize the mayor's 73 percent mandate last April as one demanding change. Their pathetic demonstrations during council meetings are best characterized as emotional room noise, never relevant to the issues, and embarrassingly expose the self-interest of the poor loser.

Let's give this administration a chance to function and reserve judgment until it makes its first major mistake.

The poor losers are on a self-defeating course—the more they delay the meetings, the less opportunity there is for the administration to make a major mistake.

Nothing ventured . . . nothing gained—or lost.

Let's face it—Pebble Beach is practically within Carmel's "sphere of influence" in an imagery sense . . . all contiguous communities should be interested in their problems and opportunities of the future . . . without being dragged back into the 19th century by the poor losers.

My compliments to you on your excellent balanced coverage of this new era in Carmel history.

A man of rare quality

Dear Editor:

When Ray Podell died in a brutal, senseless murder April 30 we lost a special, kind man of rare quality.

Although I hadn't seen Ray for over two years, the news of his tragic death shook me to the core.

Ray touched many lives with his smiles, warm hugs and deep caring for his fellow man. He was a special man, always ready to lend a hand to any cause or person in need.

Not only did his family lose a loving husband and father, we all lost a rare, priceless treasure — a friend.

How sad that his murderer did not respect his right to live. How tragic.

What can you expect?

Dear Editor:

If Carmel's mayoral contest has done nothing more than force the T-Shirt Campaign Button King to remodel his two shops, upgrade his merchandise and make a sizable donation to the Carmel Youth Center, it's almost worth the added traffic.

Although one-third the price of these items is added to AT&T (sic) Youth Center coffers, it doesn't quite do anything about double-parked trucks that can't seem to make it before noon.

But what can you expect with 40 restaurants, bars and other food outlets in town?

(Editor's note: Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood's decision to fire four planning commissioners recently did not meet with the approval of several students at Lemon Grove Summit School in San Diego. Copies of the letters were provided to The Pine Cone and are reproduced below.)

Dear Mr. Eastwood:

I am writing concerning a matter that is on my mind as well as yours. It has to do with you firing four members from the Carmel planning committee. You may have fired them and thought nothing of it, but why did you fire them? Because of a disgreement? Because they didn't want the same thing you did? To me, there is something definitely wrong here! You can't just go around firing people who have different opinions. If these four people disagree, think of the many others who also disagree but have no say.

If you build a town to suit you and only you, then you're the only one who is gonna be happy. You are the mayor, you are supposed to be working for the people of Carmel! All of the people, not just your friends or the ones that you can buy! Take a while, a long while, to think about why you wanted to be the mayor—for the people or for yourself?

Thank you for your time, if you even bother to read this!

Christina M. Rekow

Dear Clint Eastwood:

I read in Thursday's paper that you fired four planning commissioners because they simply said no to your plans to build a retail office complex. And if I was in the planning committee, I would have said no too. Because you have only been in office for two months and you plan to change the city of Carmel. I know you make good movies because I watch them, but so far in office you seem to be better in movies. So if you want people to watch your Dirty Harry movies, you should straighten up your act in office and become a cleaner Dirty Harry. You're not the autocrat in some people's minds. You're a good guy, Clint, so stay that way.

Paul Butler

PS. Make their day, Clint, rehire those people you just fired. And send me your picture and autograph.

Dear Sir:

I think that this thing on the retail office complex could be very bad for your political future. In all seriousness, I know you don't need the money, but what the hell? If Ronny boy can make president, why can't you? Sir, is what the newspaper said all true, or did you have other reasons for removing them four from office? I think you should slow down on some of these decisions. As you know, there are a lot of people out there who like you, but if you keep on doing stuff like this, nobody will vote for you.

Skip Melton

Clint:

What's up, Holmes? I heard a few things about you. I heard that you fired four people who didn't agree with you. You shouldn't fire anyone who disagrees with you. I might disagree with you in a few things— are you going to fire me? I don't work with you, but I know how they feel. I think you should hire them back, because they might have a point.

When you first got the job, I thought that was cool, but now you've changed. If I was you, I would get everyone's opinion first. I don't think I could fire anyone who disagrees with me. You got to be mayor of this small town, but when you got the job you said money wasn't the object. Well, now you are just like the other people in office, and that is money-hungry. Clint, take my advice, Holmes, money isn't the key to solve your problems, people are— and I think you should respect that.

Well, Clint, I think you should think things over before people start to dislike you. There are a lot of people who wish they had what you have now. You should make better decisions and then ask the people and see how they feel. Not unless you want to be a bad mayor and do things your way before the people of your town know.

Well, think things over, Holmes, because I gotta go, and I can't give you any more advice. You are the one in office, not me, so do things right.

John LaJoy

Dear Mr. Eastwood:

I live down here in Insane Diego. The news that you have fired four planning commissioners is getting everyone all stirred up. Some people think this is going to ruin your political future, others think you are greedy for money. Now, don't get me wrong, I know you get enough money not to be greedy, but wealthy. Is the proposal for the complex really one of the reasons why you are mayor? I know that you will probably do a good job as mayor, but I would like to get some solid facts instead of a bunch of stereotypes. Thanks for listening! I'll see you at the movies.

White, Dahlstrand join new-look commission

By NANCY HILLS

ON JUNE 11, Ken White and Olof Dahlstrand joined four other new planning commissioners in one big group swearing-in ceremony.

The entire commission now consists of Mayor Clint Eastwood's appointees.

The Carmel City Council on June 3 removed in a 3-2 vote all the planning commissioners appointed during the prevous administration. Because the city was then without a planning commission, the council declared an emergency and confirmed Eastwood's appointments to the newly-vacant seats.

Eastwood reappointed White and nominated architects Olof Dahlstrand and Fred Keeble, realtor Carla Ramsey and publisher Bill Brown to fill the seats of the former commissioners. They replace commissioners Sandy Swain, Gene Cava, Marjorie Montelius and Thomas Nash, all nominated by former Mayor Charlotte Townsend. Eastwood had appointed Bruce Roberts and Ed Hicks in May to take the expired terms of commissioners Art Mertens and Gene Hammond.

Interviews with Ramsey and Brown ran in last weeks Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

KEN WHITE

KEN WHITE, athletic director of Monterey High School, is in the unique position of being the only planning commissioner reappointed from the previous commission. His nomination received unanimous approval from the Carmel City Council and he was promptly elected chairman of the new planning commission at its first meeting June 11.

KEN WHITE

White was appointed by former Mayor Charlotte Townsend to the planning commission in January to fill Commissioner John Logan's vacated post. Prior to that appointment, White served on the Carmel Forestry Commission, an experience he feels contributes to his planning commission skills.

"It was wonderful training to have been on the forestry board because it makes a lot of determinations about building on lots in the area," White said.

He said he really did not know why he was reappointed to the commission, but of his former fellow commissioners and their removal, White said:

"Well, I'd hate to think that after serving my community, when I come to the end of my time that I would not be notified in a suitable manner and thanked. But I can understand that in a small town nothing is secret and I can see how that scenario developed. By the time the news got out, it was too late.

"I guess I feel that people are a valuable commodity and they need to be treated as humanly as possible in those types of situations."

Recently, White said, the commissioners were "under fire and I thought they held up their heads pretty well. During the last election, the general plan was called into question and I saw them struggling to keep the law in place. That's (general plan) the law of the land and if we don't like sections of it, we should change it."

It will take some time to bring the other commissioners "up to speed," he added, and the commission will need some leadership.

But White believes the planning department is much better organized than in previous years and the city now has a very capable staff to work with.

There is one lingering problem in Carmel he would like to see eliminated, however.

"I'm really disturbed as a citizen that we've got this faction or element on one side and this faction or element on the other side. I support the city of Carmel, I don't support individual people.

"Let's get things into perspective. The 'grand old lady' of Carmel needs some time to rest from the rigors of the campaign and needs to do a sensible job of governing itself."

For instance, White said, there are some major issues coming up before the planning commission and people need to get involved.

"First, there are land use questions such as the R-4 zone where some really cooperative thinking is going to have to be done. It is really the last stupendous piece of property left in Carmel.

"Secondly, the Grunion Run property on San Carlos Street and Fourth Avenue could be a beautiful addition to the community. In it's initial design, it looks very compatible to the community, but the mass and lot coverage needs to be looked at carefully."

White also would like to see some changes in the planning commission itself, changes he suggested to the new commissioners at the June 11 meeting.

He would like to see a "mediation committee" set up for applicants who are turned down in close voting or when the commission and the applicant are not that far apart in what they would like to see. Currently a denied application can only be appealed to the city council.

"If there is no agreement, then they have the right to go to the council for an appeal," he said.

He would also like to see all the members of the planning commission participate in the land use committee discussions. Right now, the land use committee consists of three members of the planning commission who review applications with the applicant and makes recommendations for or against denial. That can be confusing, White said, for other commissioners who were not present at committee meetings.

The planning commission, White said, is the conduit for the city's general plan.

While it "is not the most interesting reading" White said he has ever done, "it is the law of the city and of all of the people had input on it. That's something the planning commission is going to have to remember."

Recent planning commission problems may be due to trying to implement a new general plan with its new restrictions and major changes, White said.

"There may be portions that need to be looked at but, for goodness sake, it was the first try at planning in such depth (in Carmel). It's a much more inclusive document than we have ever had before," he pointed out.

It's intention was "to preserve Carmel for us, the citizens," White added.

"I think the planning commission in the past has had a pretty fair concept of what the tastes of the city are," but "a planning commissioner represents the city, not him or herself, and should try to be up to date with the commission."

Also, a commissioner should vote according to what is allowed by the law, not on their own personal feelings or opinion, White said.

The planning commission plays an important role in the city, he feels.

"If you didn't have a commission consisting of representatives from the community, you'd have chaos. They should always be appointed and never elected," he added.

The planning commission, he said, is the "last step you take before going to the council. It's the community conscience. The applicants have to compromise sometimes and the planning commissioners have to compromise sometimes, but elected officials have a voting constituency to satisfy and the planning commission doesn't," White said.

In addition, White said, "it's my feeling that the planning commission should help the citizens as much as possible to get their applications passed — in keeping with the general plan."

Carmel is a long-term commitment for him.

"I'm a resident and I want to live here a long time. I want my kids to live and raise their families like my wife and I have.

"I think this town is having a hard time — as it always has — accepting the fact we have thousands of people who want to visit us. It's hard to live with that. The pressures on the average citizen in this town are growing and how to handle it involves questions to which there are no answers. We can just try to make it easier."

OLOF DAHLSTRAND

ARCHITECT OLOF Dahlstrand enters his second term as a planning commissioner with the distinction of being the only new appointee who received unanimous approval from the city council.

Dahlstrand's first appointment to the planning commission was in 1968. He was a commissioner until 1972, when he was elected to the Carmel City Council. He served on the council until 1976.

Now retired, Dahlstrand began his Carmel practice in 1958 after he moved here from San Francisco. Examples of his work can be seen around the village, including the Carmel Plaza building fronting Ocean Avenue, the Dansk building on the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos, the Crocker Bank building on the corner of Mission Street and Sixth Avenue and the Wells Fargo Bank building on San Carlos Street. He has a tendency, he added, to avoid the "Mother Goose, cutsey style."

After observing the area for years, Dahlstrand feels problems Carmel faces in the future are problems for the entire Monterey Peninsula.

"The economic forces are monumental and the natural forces, the beauty of the location and salutory climate — plus Carmel's reputation over the years," he observed, has made the peninsula its "own worst enemy."

"It's a matter of learning to deal with it and learning to live with it," he said.

However, Dahlstrand thinks "generally, Carmel has been dealing with it rather well and the basic policies and approach the city has taken has been very good. The basic 'skeleton' (of city planning) is strong."

The Carmel he remembers from his earlier days as as a public servant and the Carmel of today are "fundamentally" the same and it remains what he calls a "little sleepy town."

"The biggest changes have taken place on the outside — in the mouth of the Valley, portions of Monterey, Seaside. That includes the building up of a tremendous amount of auto traffic outside Carmel," Dahlstrand said.

It has made it a little more difficult in daily living, he observed, and there is "no doubt about it," the growth of shopping centers in the surrounding areas has affected businesses in town. But shopping outside of Carmel is nothing new, Dahlstrand said, and before large food stores and malls were built on Carmel's periphery, people went to other areas to shop.

Even Ocean Avenue, he said, is not really different than it was 20 years ago. Traffic, both pedestrian and automobile, has increased over the years, but that increase has not been "tremendous."

If there has been change, it is essentially in the residential district, Dahlstrand said, where people buy a "modest cottage," then either tear it down or remodel it.

But, he added, even that has been a slow process and he questions the necessity of a design review by the planning commission of residential structures.

"The architectural character of a house is part of the owner's identity and it's what he wants to project," Dahlstrand said.

Structural requirements such as height, mass and setbacks may be sufficient restrictions for homes in the area, Dahlstrand said.

"I don't think the average citizen is aware of how much city government has moved his life until he tries to remodel," Dahlstrand commented.

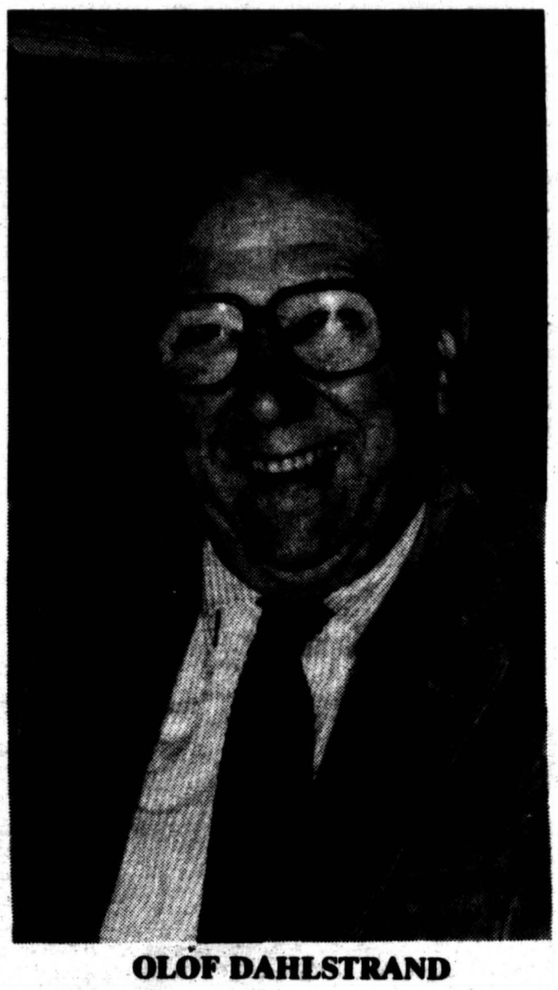
This is an area where traditional city government has stayed out of people's lives, he added.

Dahlstrand considers the business district to be a different situation and design review is appropriate and probably necessary.

"In the commercial district, the building is a part of the merchandising and that can produce some outlandish, garish products," he said.

He added, however, that the business district in Carmel is the "envy of cities all over the world." When he was on the city council or the planning commission, Dalhstrand said city governments from all over would write and ask how Carmel managed to keep it that way .

He does not, however, advocate returning Carmel planning to the way it was before the new general plan.



OLOF DAHLSTRAND

"What I'm hoping to suggest is to take a hard look at some of the recent changes and see how they are working," Dahlstrand said.

Some of the provisions in the general plan, Dahlstrom feels, are "based on the suspicion that the sky lacks structural stability" — his paraphase of the "the sky is falling" homily that portends disaster is about to occur.

While he states that a standard planning directive is that economic hardship cannot be taken into consideration in planning decisions, down-zoning, which can lead to lowered property values, is something that "always becomes a very, very sticky situation.

"Whenever you are down-grading, you have to have a pretty good rationale for doing it."

Some of the inequities created by down-zoning in the general plan need to be looked into, he said.

The new planning commission will have to still deal with "Carmel's albatross...tiny lots," and the "subjective" decisions on use permits and design review.

Dalhstrand feels large homes on small lots "leads to crowding which tends to deteriorate the community's value."

Design review can have both a good and bad effect.

"On a design review, the only thing one can do is keep absolutely awful designs from being accepted," he said.

There is a danger in that, too, he added.

"What tends to follow is absolutely brilliant designs don't get accepted either because those can be as extreme in the eyes of the beholder as an awful design."

Use permits, he said, are a planning device and a way for the planning commission and staff to judge what is good or bad for the community. It avoids the "precise legal language" that otherwise would be required for restrictions.

The process is subject to abuse, he pointed out, but the "free enterprise system has no license to run wild either. It has to be looked on as 'what's good for the community.' "

Dahlstrand disagrees with Councilman James Wright, who objected during the nomination process, to three architects on the same planning commission. (The other two newly-appointed architects are Ed Hicks and Fred Keeble.)

"Architects, for the most part, have proven to be pretty open-minded and dedicated to the community," he said. "By way of training and background they have a broad view of problems."

New planners have their work cut out for them

By NANCY HILLS

THAT'S THREE in a row for the new-look Carmel Planning Commission.

A 4 p.m. Wednesday, June 25 meeting will be the third in three weeks for the new commissioners who were sworn in June 11.

The planning commission will consider concept design approval for the Grunion Run property, two use permits for retail stores and conduct a lot line merger hearing.

In addition, the Carmel Planning Department is preparing a list of special projects they are working on and ask the commissioners to decide which ones get priority.

The commissioners will also consider planning commission procedure changes recommended by Chairman Ken White during a June 11 study session meeting. White was elected chairman of the commission during that meeting.

One of the most substantial items the new commission inherited from the last commission was the development of the Grunion Run property on Fourth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

In May, the planning commission approved a master use permit for the proposed square footage and an underground garage.

A master use permit determines the maximum amount of use on the site, but actual square footage, how it is used, building mass and location can be reduced during the next step, concept design.

The commission will consider concept design during the June 25 meeting.

In January, Carmel attorney Robert D'Isidoro purchased the 16,000 sq. ft. property from the Doud Estate for approximately $800,000. He has proposed to replace the closed-down Grunion Run restaurant and a vacant single-family home located on the site with a two-story office/apartment building complex.

The proposed complex consists of apartments on the second level and 10,600 sq. ft. of commercial space on the first. It is divided into three Spanish/Mediterranean style buildings with a 33-parking space underground garage.

Original plans called for 34 parking spaces and 10 apartments but one space was dropped to protect the roots of a large redwood on the property. The planning staff report states that it is still over the legally required number of parking spaces.

The former commissioners had requested the tenth apartment be eliminated because it was located on the first floor with the commercial square footage.

D'Isidoro said that if all goes well and he is able to get his design approved this month, construction could start in the fall.

•

THE COMMISSIONERS will also consider procedural changes suggested by Chairman Ken White during a study session June 11.

White, the only commissioner renominated from the prior commission, asked the new members to consider creating a mediation committee or board to help applicants put together an acceptable alternative to a denied application.

White said when the commission and the applicants were "close" on what they wanted but still far enough apart that the project is denied, the only recourse now is an appeal to the city council. White said he would like some procedure before it goes that far and suggested a "mediation committee" of some kind.

His second suggestion was to change the land use committee to a workshop-style planning commission meeting where all the commissioners are present. White said that he "felt at a disadvantage" when the commissioners on the land use committee started discussing the decisions made at the committee level.

The land use committee currently consists of three commissioners who informally review with applicants their use permits, subdivisions an/or variance requests. It then makes recommendations to the entire commission for approval or denial and conditions that should be attached to the permit if passed.

•

ADDITIONALLY, the commissioners will get review of major projects before the city such as the ice cream ordinance, R-4 zoning, specific plans for the Bennet property and Countess Kinnouli Estate, in-lieu parking fees and the R-1 ordinance review.

Planning Director Diane White will explain the projects to the commissioners and ask for direction on which ones the staff should concentrate on finishing first.

In other business, the commission will also consider:

• A use permit for Carmel Presbyterian Church to construct a two-story building over an existing parking lot and for an addition to the sanctuary to increase its seating capacity. The church is located at the corner of Junipero and Mountain View avenues.

• A lot line merger hearing for six adjoining lots with 25 ft. on Ninth Avenue between Mission Street and Junipero Avenue. Owner Shirley Young, has requested that the lots be merged into four lots with 40 ft. frontages.

In the 1920s, explained Staff Planner Brian Roseth, an obscure ordinace was passed in Carmel that required all 25 ft. lots be merged. Under the ordinance the lots would be coupled together into three lots. Owner Young wants to redefine the lot lines and obtain four lots.

• A use permit for a contemporary crafts and home furnishing store at the former location of the Craft House on the corner Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue. Gail Palumbo has applied to change the use permit from a gift store to a more of contemporary home furnishing store. Palumbo will sell handmade contemporary crafts.

• A use permit for a fabric art store in the Court of the Fountains called Shelley and Mom.

Plan for a parking shuttle at high school

CONCERNED about the effect on neighbors already enduring nine months of teenage traffic, the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education Tuesday night postponed a decision on whether to allow use of the high school for a parking and shuttle service to downtown Carmel.

In another major decision, trustees unanimously approved a recommendation from Supt. Robert Infelise to promote River School Principal Rosemary Montgomery to the position of director of curriculum and instruction.

Teacher Bob Harr is the primary partner in a plan to park cars on the Carmel High School lot on weekends this summer.

Tourists would park for about $5 per day from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and then be able to ride a free shuttle to downtown.

Harr is trying to work out an agreement with the school board on using the property. The lease would financially benefit the schools, he said.

But trustees, after hearing from a concerned neighbor, expressed fears that permission would mean year-round parking and year-round problems for the residents who live nearby.

Trustees continued a decision until the neighbors could be contacted and Harr also will provide more complete financial information at the July 1 session.

Montgomery's promotion means that the River School principal's position will be filled from within the district; a replacement is expected to be named shortly.

In other matters, trustees:

• Approved a "wise wish" program for "highly-motivated" high school juniors and seniors that will allow them to develop their own curriculum in social studies and English. The program was recommended by the Project 2000 committee.

• Approved a special core program for troublesome ninth and 10th-grade students who otherwise may drop out of school.

Business, parking big issues

No surprises in phase one of Carmel survey

NEARLY THREE out of four Carmel retail shops are visitor serving and account for 81 percent of the total sales in the city; there is no need for controls on night-time hours; and the city needs between 200 and 300 additional parking spaces to meet peak demand.

Those are just three of the major issues included in a 100-plus page "City of Carmel-by-the-Sea Three Phase Implementation Program Draft Phase One Report" released this week.

The report by Denise Duffy and Associates basically is the data for the now-underway phase two, which will provide the city with proposed solutions to traffic, parking and congestion problems.

The third and final phase is an environmental analysis of the effects any adopted solutions — such as a Sunset Center parking garage — would have on Carmel.

The three-phase report carries an approximately $50,000 price tag.

In the summary of findings, the consultant covers four major areas with 43 separate issues. Some of the keynote findings include:

• "There is no one specific type of commercial business significantly predominating over other businesses. The total existing commercial business establishments consist of 49 percent retail goods, 39 percent services and 12 percent retail foods.

• "Retail stores account for nearly two-thirds of the city's commercial uses. The highest percentage of one commercial use is retail clothing and shoe stores, which comprise 14 percent of total business.

• "About 72 percent of all retail businesses consist of five major uses that are considered visitor-serving: apparel stores, restaurants, art galleries, gift/novelty stores and jewelry stores. When all businesses are considered, about 50 percent are primarily visitor-oriented, 25 percent are resident-oriented and 25 percent serve both residents and visitors.

• "Excluding restaurants and motels, only a small percentage of businesses remain open after 6 p.m., indicating that there does not appear to be a current excessive problem of businesses remaining open in the evening.

• "The predominantely visitor-serving uses — apparel stores, art galleries, restaurants and gift/novelty stores — have all remained in the top five major retail commercial land uses in Carmel-by-the-Sea since 1973.

• "Approximately 81 percent of sales in Carmel-by-the-Sea are made by businesses that are primarily oriented to visitors.

• "Retail vacancy rents are low and rents are high, indicating strong demand. Strong demand for retail space by new businesses compensates for vacancies due to business failures or relocations."

•

EXISTING TRAFFIC conditions also drew numerous findings by Denise Duffy and Associates.

These include:

• "Visitor traffic constitutes about 50 to 60 percent of total daily traffic, based on interviews of downtown parkers conducted during Thanksgiving week 1985. Visitor traffic increases substantially during the peak summer season.

• "Principal access routes to downtown Carmel and estimated traffic distributions are as follows: Ocean Avenue, 32 percent; Carpenter Street 16 percent; Carpenter Street/Serra Avenue/Camino Del Monte, 14 percent; Rio Road, 23 percent; and San Antonio Street, 15 percent.

• "During peak periods, limited or no capacity exists for left turning or crossing traffic at major intersections under existing conditions and traffic controls.

• "Sixty-seven percent of business owners surveyed indicated that goods delivery was accomplished from a double-parked vehicle.

• "A survey of business owners revealed a limited ability to reschedule delivery times due to limited control over drivers, but also indicated some willingness to impose time restrictions.

• "Estimated existing parking need in the study area (shortage): 200 to 300 spaces.

• "The majority of respondents (to a parker survey) indicated that they were able to find parking spaces within two blocks of their primary destination."

Home run derby set for June 21

'IT'S GOING, going, gone!" will be the cry of the day Saturday, June 21 when the Carmel Youth Baseball league hosts its First Annual Home Run Derby/Dinner Dance at Larson Field and Crespi Hall at the Carmel Mission.

The home run derby, which will be open to all ages, will be held from 1-6 p.m. at Larson Field on Rio Road next to the Mission, with a full-course Mexican dinner (or hot dogs for any finicky Gringos out there) set for 5:30-6:30 p.m.

Following that a local DJ will spin "oldies but goodies" for the whole family from 7-10 p.m. at Crespi Hall. A live auction will also be held.

Tickets for the dinner/dance are $6.95 and can be purchased from any team mother, the Larson Field snack bar, Carmel Bay Company (corner of Lincoln and Ocean in Carmel), and Bay Bikes (640 Wave St., Cannery Row).

A pitching machine will deliver three balls for a $1, 50 cents for three balls for children 8 and under.

All proceeds benefit Carmel Youth Baseball. For more information call Ron Allen at 646-9090 or Gary Gray at 372-7571.

Valley residents' response to subsequent EIR

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IF MONDAY night's relatively peaceful response is any barometer, the subsequent environmental impact report for the draft Carmel Valley Master Plan will breeze through public hearings on its way to a court date with Judge Richard Silver.

A standing room only crowd which numbered near the century mark packed the Carmel Valley Community Center to hear Monterey County officials provide an overview of the subsequent environmental impact report (EIR) and ask questions about the information it contains.

The next informational session will be in the city of Carmel — at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 2 in Carpenter Hall on the Mission Street side of Sunset Center.

Copies of the subsequent EIR are available for review in local libraries. The deadline for comments on the adequacy of the document is July 10.

The consultant, Planning Analysis and Development, then will review the comments and respond in the final EIR that will be the subject of formal public hearings.

The first official public hearing on the final EIR will be held Aug. 27 before the Monterey County Planning Commission. EIR hearings will be scheduled before supervisors in September.

Once certified, the EIR will serve as the environmental data base for the county as the process of redrafting the Carmel Valley Master Plan begins.

Hearings on the master plan, which formalizes into policy the goals and objectives recommended in the EIR, are expected to be held by the county planning commission in September and October before going to supervisors in October and November.

Supervisors tentatively have set Dec. 9 as the date to adopt the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

From there, the county must submit the final EIR to Silver, who then will decide whether to lift his moratorium on discretionary use permits.

The revisions to the Carmel Valley Master Plan and its accompanying EIR are in response to Silver's moratorium issued for the first time in 1979 at the request of the City of Carmel.

The city had sued Monterey County for not preparing an EIR to accompany the first master plan. The county then prepared an EIR and revised the master plan only to have it tossed out by Silver again in 1984.

Silver ruled that the county failed to follow proper hearing procedures for the first environmental impact report certification process. Silver also questioned the adequacy of the initial EIR.

•

SOME OF the key provisions in the 1986 subsequent EIR are:

- A plan to allow only 900 new lots of record in the next 20 years to be built at the rate of just 45 annually.
- The continuance of a subdivision evaluation system that will recommend to supervisors which projects will be developed based on environmental concerns.
- Senior citizen units are exempt from the allocation system. However, every two senior citizen residences will count as one unit to be subtracted from the allocation.

For example, if 150 homes are built as part of Carmel Valley Overview, 75 of those units would be subtracted from the buildout number of 900. But those 75 units will not have to be phased as required of other subdivisions.

- The Odello East development would stay within the master plan planning area, thus making it subject to the allocation system.

However, the subsequent EIR would include a policy supporting the proposed flood mitigation project planned as part of the Odello development.

- A recommended policy in support of the proposed San Clemente Dam and to encourage reclamation projects.
- Development on hillsides "shall be strictly limited to that which can be successfully screened."
- Development at lower evaluations "shall be given preference over other allocations as a means of preserving rural and visual quality."
- Cluster development would be prohibited at the Fiskdale Ranch and in mid-Valley. Zoning of less than one acre per unit is prohibited in Carmel Valley Village.
- Property owners in the floodplain could transfer their development rights to other locations at the Valley floor.
- Policies are to be adopted supporting: widening Highway 1 to four lanes from Carmel Valley Road to Rio Road; improving the shoulders and spot realignments to Los Laureles Grade; and adding left turn lanes at all intersections on Carmel Valley Road between Robinson Canyon Road and Ford Road.
- The county should explore alternatives to the Hatton Canyon Freeway that would minimize traffic problems but at the same time not be as growth-inducing as the freeway proposal.

•

MANY OF the 100 faces in attendance Monday night were familiar, most of whom had sat through the previous master plan hearings. A few had been members of the special citizens advisory committee designed to prepare recommendations for the master plan.

Some of the recognizeable names with interest enough to attend included: Earl Moser, Stanley and Darby Worth, Richard Greenwood, Dick Dalsemer, Jerry Foote, Rod Holmgren, Gary Tate, Carl Hooper, Denise Duffy, Alan Williams, Tom May and Dick Heuer.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman called the session a "very critical meeting...Today is a critical day. At last we have before us a document."

Strasser Kauffman told the audience that the consultant knows that the EIR must stand up in court "for them to get paid," under terms of the contract.

"I am very aware of the hardships local population has suffered under the moratorium," she continued.

However, Strasser Kauffman indicated that she has "mixed emotions" about the moratorium because it did give the county a "second chance to do things right."

Monterey County Planning Director Robert Slimmon added a light moment when he told the audience that in 1979 supervisors overruled staff recommendations that an EIR be prepared. "I always love to tell this story particularly since Karin wasn't on the board at the time," Slimmon said.

Slimmon explained that county staff has met with Silver throughout the process to ensure that the subsequent EIR is following the judge's recommendations.

Slimmon also advises that all comments and questions be submitted to the county in writing so that the consultant can respond in the final EIR.

"Don't rely on staff to interpret what you might tell us," Slimmon said.

As far as the Dec. 9 deadline is concerned, Slimmon said, "we're optimistic" and even expressed the hope that "the date will be speeded up."

County staff planner Lynne Mounday describes the subsequent environmental impact report for the draft Carmel Valley Master Plan as "nothing but an encyclopedia. It gives you the information to look up."

•

STANLEY WORTH was the first member of the audience to speak during the question-and-answer session.

Worth noted that the subsequent EIR does not have two key pieces of information but still makes recommendations concerning the Hatton Canyon Freeway proposal and the plan for a new Carmel River dam.

Worth pointed out that the EIRs for both of those major projects are not completed and should be at least referenced in the master plan subsequent environmental impact report.

He also said that there is a "complete absence" of references to widening Highway 1 with an overpass at Carmel Valley Road, which is the most-discussed alternative to the Hatton Canyon Freeway project.

And, Worth said the EIR should have used zero as its base number of units for the total allocation system and build on that based on environmental constraints. Instead the counsultant started with the 1,181 new units of record recommended in the 1984 EIR.

John Radon questioned whether the traffic counts are based on maximum buildout. Mounday replied that the traffic circulation is based on a "worst case" scenario with no building controls, and also on "what we expect to happen."

Carl Hooper asked what the county used as a definition of vacant lot when considering the maximum buildout.

Slimmon responded that staff went through its building records and used legal lots of record with no building as its basis.

Robert Greenwood pointed out that there is nothing in the subsequent EIR to indicate the impacts if the Odello Ranch is not included in the master plan planning area.

Greenwood also noted that there is inadequate information provided on the impacts of the senior citizen units that are exempted from the allocation system.

Earl Moser raised concerns that the subsequent EIR does not include specific readings on air pollution taken from the monitoring station off Ford Road near Tularcitos School.

Dick Heuer expressed fears that language in the document may tend to eventually allow Carmel Valley Road to be widened to four lanes east of Robinson Canyon Road. Residents basically see Robinson Canyon Road as the end of any widening activities.

BEHIND THE LINES
BY MICHAEL GARDNER

'There's no escape from Carmel'

IN THEIR locally-popular Don't Mess With the Mayor, rockers The Medflys warned in a chorus that "there's no escape from Carmel."

Nothing is truer these days as Carmelites come back with tales that even long-separated loved ones at first sight don't say, "I missed you," but rather, "How's Clint doing?"

FRANK LYNCH, the popular middle school principal now on his way to a promotion to head of Petaluma High School, never lost his perspective of what education is all about. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Take the case of restaurateurs Greg Cellitti and Pam Mason, who unlike Rambo braved the terrorism threat and took a three-week excursion through Europe recently.

Arriving in London, the couple picked up several British newspapers to find each issue carrying wire service photos of new Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood.

"Mayor Clint Eastwood of Carmel presiding over his first council meeting. Later, he fulfilled his election promise to allow more ice cream parlours in the California resort," boasted The Times, albeit erroneously, under a photo of the smiling Clint.

The World also noted Clint's first meeting as mayor with a headline bleating, "How ice cream made Clint's Day." The story goes: "Dirty Harry star Clint Eastwood kept a promise he made before he became mayor of Carmel — to give the city ice cream shops.

"The move was rushed through at 55-year-old (my editorial comment: now 56, but who's counting?) Eastwood's first meeting of the California resort's council, to the delight of the city. There was furore (no typo, that's English for furor) last year when planners banned ice cream licences (again, English spelling) because of litter."

Even by reading book reviews could Greg and Pam not find escape. There, a reviewer quoted an outtake of Rex Reed's Personal Effects": "Doris Day's become the local collect and spay lady with about 900 dogs around her...Eastwood's playing mayor in one horse Carmel..."

"They're really up on it," said Greg, back at home now in front of the grill at Friar Tuck's. "The tour guide thought it was illegal to eat ice cream cones and wear high heels in Carmel."

At the hotel, Greg and Pam relaxed by watching a tense soccer match that went into sudden death overtime. Suddenly, the announcer cut in with a special bulletin usually reserved for "the world is ending" kind of news.

But he just wanted to tell fans that tonight's movie of the week, High Plains Drifter would be shown in its entirety following the match.

Fleeing to Switzerland, Pam and Greg went by the local Lucerne movie house showing Das Texan, or as we better know it, The Outlaw Josey Wales. "The movie was packed," Greg said.

Greg had given some Clint buttons to fellow tour passengers and one gentleman from Taiwan refused to take it off during the entire two-week trip.

"Everywhere those guys went, everybody wanted a button," Greg said.

In Venice, Pam and Greg wandered down to a local museum where on exhibit, they discovered, was an Ansel Adams retrospective.

Enough to drive a man (and woman) to drink, they ducked into a local bar where the owner immediately began asking questions. "He wanted to know if Clint got his ice cream store. The press said Clint ran so that he could open his own ice cream store," Greg said.

Finally, Pam and Greg sought relief at the religious landmark of Assisi in Northern Italy. But no. Out pops Father Leonard Testa, an Aussie, who after learning they were from Carmel bowed and said, "I wish Mr. Eastwood luck and I pray the Australians win the America's Cup."

Thinking about all this drove me north for four days last week, happily wheeling up Highway 1 and tuned to KFRC radio on a pleasant Thursday a.m.

The DJ interrupts by starting a call-in for those listeners wanting to answer the question, "What really bugs you?"

And minutes later the first caller said, "What really bugs me is when my mom flies all the way out from Wisconsin and we drive to Carmel to see Clint Eastwood and he's not there."

Off went the radio.

Sorry, there's just no escape from Carmel these days.

WHAT DOES CLINT MEAN?

As long as we're on the subject, I have available a postcard to the aforementioned couple from a friend who went to the Oxford English Dictionary and looked up "Clint."

"Clint (Clynte, Klynte): Scottish origin dating from 1200 AD. A rock, flint-like and hard, projecting from the side of a hill or a part of a crag standing out between rock crevices."

Or "Clint: A stone fashioned to be used for curling on ice, used as in lawn bowls, but on an icy surface."

I'M READY, ARE YOU?

All this talk of ice cream cones by the city has put me in the mood for the free Lick-In. The scoop is the second annual event will be from noon until 2 p.m. Saturday, June 21 over at Devendorf Park.

Frank Enea Dairies will supply the carts, cones and ice cream...T-shirt sales will benefit the "Life Saver" program, which provides free smoke detectors for Carmel senior citizens. So far, 176 have been installed.

So I want to see even Paul Laub wearing one of those lick-in shirts Monday morning, the 23rd.

MARK AN X ON JULY 1

Expect Big Sur marathon discussions at 4:30 the afternoon of July 1 over at the county court house in Salinas. Holding court will be the board of supervisors.

A resolution by supervisors either way will go a long way in lobbying Caltrans and the CHP on whether the marathon should/should not continue.

THE WILSON RESPONSE

As expected, Sen. Pete Wilson's office used the standard bureaucratese in responding to the "Coastal Partnership for Big Sur," which has put together a coalition of groups that see alternatives to federalizing Big Sur.

Aide Jim Burroughs told me that the senator "welcomes" any help he receives in protecting Big Sur and is "glad to see" Rep. Leon Panetta's interest.

However, no specific reply to the specifics. Burroughs said the senator first wants to wait until he sees the proposal in writing.

Word is that if Wilson and Sen. Alan Cranston maintain support of the bill, it will be tough to defeat since the unwritten rule in Washington is "you stay out of my state and I'll stay out of your state" as long as both senators agree on the legislation.

Last defeat for federalization only came when the junior senator, S.I. Hayakawa, battled Cranston's proposed legislation.

Those opposed to the bill need to make their points to California congressmen, having a better chance to defeat the measure in the House of Representatives where Leon is a respected and powerful rep. A coalition of state representatives could balance Wilson and Cranston's influence in the senate.

For those who want to hear more, join the Friends of the Big Sur Coast for a steak barbecue and potluck dessert down at the state park from noon to 3 p.m. Sunday, June 22.

Cost is $6 for adults and half that for the kids. Good time to enjoy the park and hear local politicians, including Panetta, Assemblyman Eric Seastrand, state Sen. Ken Maddy and numerous county and city reps.

QUICK QUIPS

At Piccadilly Park, the arbor is history, the trellis is in place and a new fence has sprouted around the pond.

The city will spend about $58,000 on new beach access stairs at Ninth, 10th and 12th avenues. Work began earlier this week.

Somewhere in the process are the plans to use Dick Lugo's restrooms up at the Shell Station. Cost would be $630 for the summer, plus another $300 for the signs. Expect council discussion July 1.

Hearings began yesterday on city versus Mission Ranch court case. Sidebar case is city suit to recoup court costs from the county, which has dropped out of the Mission Ranch appeal. The city is complaining that County Counsel Jose Ramos has prepared briefs that are 75 percent in defense of Mission Ranch and 25 percent related to court costs even though the county is no longer a party in the original suit.

Paul Laub dropped by while I was away complaining that he has given $8,000 to the Mayor's Youth Fund, not $6,000 as previously reported. Correction is noted.

However, Laub also added that he has no illegal signs in his store. I never said they were illegal, being much aware of libel law.

But, hey, keep those checks coming in anyway, OK?

at 10 p.m., dousing fires and confiscating beer.

The city with the help of Ft. Ord is passing out fliers to beachgoers on all of the rules.

Ft. Ord is doing much cooperating. Carmel Police Lt. Jon Bowman met with 70 sergeant majors to tell them about the crackdown so they can pass the word to the troops.

From now on a chief warrant officer and staff sergeant from the base's provost marshall's office will be on the beach Friday and Saturday nights. Ft. Ord assistance came after talks between Clint and mucky-mucks at the base.

All of this comes on the heels of complaints about rowdy GIs on the beach, a problem experienced at Del Monte Beach in Monterey until a city-Ft. Ord effort helped curb some of the drinking, drug abuse and general craziness there.

YOUTH CENTER TAKEOVER?

Doug Schmitz has been meeting with the youth center president, Ron Faia, about the "possible transfer of directorship of the facility" to the city.

Of course, that's if the council okays $20,000 to help finance a new director.

Expect future contract talks with resolution by school's opening.

CLINT'S CARMEL

This time of the year, Carmel always is full of life. But Life is now full of Carmel.

We're talking about, of course, the magazine called Life, which has a four-page, seven-photograph spread on Carmel in the July edition.

Headlined "In Quaint Carmel, Clint's in Charge," the Life article provides a profile of His Honor, plus photos of him in front of city hall eating mint chocolate chip ice cream, kissing a baby, inspecting police officers and gazing out over the Pacific.

But not all is well with the Life article written by Paul Witteman and photographed by Ken Regan. Reading an advance copy, I got the feeling I was thumbing through People at the dentist's office rather than Life.

For one, the lead paragraph in the story tells how Clint brought back ice cream cones in his first meeting. We all know by now that cones have never been banned and so far the council has not adopted the resolution loosening ice cream parlor regulations.

I also appreciate that we're not the only ones with typos — Carmel Camera Center's Bob Neimeyer is quoted in the story and called "Bog."

There also is a staged photo, showing Clint and Councilmembers Bob Fischer and Elinor Laiolo. (Councilmembers James Wright and Helen Arnold were absent from the session.) The photo was taken on an afternoon well before the first council session.

Anyway, the photo has a darkened figure pointing at the council with the caption reading, "Mayor Clint Eastwood and council members Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer consider a plea."

Since I was at city hall during the photo session, readers may want to know that the darkened figure is none other than Barney Laiolo, ex-mayor and husband to Elinor.

All of the world is a stage with Clint, and we guess those who cover him as well.

But, buy it anyway. How often does your hometown grace the pages of Life?

FINALLY, FRANK

In the news biz, you write about the comings and goings of people all of the time. Some you're glad to see gone, others you wish could stay.

In the case of Frank Lynch, it's a lot of both.

Lynch, the popular middle school principal, has packed his bags and this September will assume new duties as head of Petaluma High School.

It is definitely a great opportunity for Frank so I'm glad for him.

Selfishly, I hate to see Frank go.

Even during the troublesome recall year Frank conducted himself in a professional manner. He was always friendly, open, honest and willing to look at the bright side of things.

Often the recall madness became all-consuming and then Frank would call me about a student who had done something worth noting and I'd come down with the camera and pen.

Frank never lost the perspective that kids are what it's all about and he wouldn't let me either.

Thanks Frank, and good luck.

Approval of $5.9 million budget expected by city council today

THE CARMEL City Council is expected to take its final look at the 1986-87 $5.9 municipal budget in a special session Thursday, June 19.

The council will meet at 10 a.m. at city hall. Also on the agenda is a discussion on proposed improvements to Highway 68.

Key items to be addressed include:

- Allocating $10,000 to help finance a feasibility study for the proposed 1,500-seat auditorium on the south Sunset Center parking lot.

The new auditorium is proposed by an organization called Friends of Sunset Center, which would pay the remaining $13,000 for the feasibility study.

- Spending $20,000 to help finance a full-time recreation director who will oversee programs operated in conjunction with the Carmel Youth Center and Carmel Unified School District.
- Four separate contingency funds that total about $1 million.
- A police budget of $1.33 million for 31 full-time employees.
- A 2 percent pay raise for staff that will cost about $129,000.
- With the exception of the recreation director, no new employees will be added.
- About two-thirds of the revenues will be generated from predominantly tourist sources as $2.43 million is expected to be taken in through the 10 percent room tax and another $1.29 million from the city's share of the sales tax.
- A $7,500 grant to the Carmel Business Association.

In a separate matter, the council will hear a proposal from Susan Whitman on alternative improvements to Highway 68 between Carmel Hill and Pacific Grove.

Whitman, a Pacific Grove councilwoman and member of the chamber of commerce, will update the council on the Holman Highway Task Force activities. She is chairperson of the task force.

The key question before the council is whether Carmel should support a task force proposal to delete the proposed Haul Road gate. The gate is a requirement for the Pebble Beach Co. as part of its permit for the Spanish Bay resort project.

There is some local sentiment that if the gate is eliminated a result would be more traffic using the Carmel entrance at North San Antonio Street.

The task force, however, is fearful that the gate and its accompanying signal will just add to the congestion on Highway 68.

Other proposals to be discussed include widening of the highway, adding passing lanes and making improvements at the signal fronting Community Hospital.

Cachagua residents sought for Cachagua Area Plan

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman is seeking interested Cachagua area residents who would be available to work with the Planning Department in formulating the upcoming Cachagua Area Plan.

This newly appointed Citizens Advisory Committee will begin work in July and will meet in regular sessions over the next six to 12 months.

The Cachagua Citizens Advisory Committee (CCAC) will advise the Monterey County Planning Department in its preparation of the Cachagua Area Plan, one of eight detailed planning areas within the Monterey County General Plan.

"This Advisory Committee is crucial to the formulation of the plan," Strasser Kauffman said. "The Cachagua area is among the county's most pastoral and beautiful, an area worthy of the most careful planning we can accomplish."

Cachagua area residents interested in serving on the CCAC are urged to contact Supervisor Strasser Kauffman by mail at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, or call 649-6515.

Water district rewards low-water use landscapers

By NANCY HILLS

ALMOST EVERYONE loves a garden, but for William and Claire Franklin their garden is a garden of love.

It was designed and planted for them by their son, Thomas Franklin, who died suddenly last year at the age of 33.

In his honor, the Franklins entered the garden he designed for their Carmel Valley home in the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's Second Annual Award for Low-Water Using Landscaping.

It won the single-family residential category, making the Franklins very proud.

The low-water use landscaping award was started as a part of the water district's efforts to encourage sensible water usage on the peninsula, according to Water District Demand Management Coordinator Michael Ricker. Winners were selected from this year's 50 entries, Ricker said.

Low-water maintenance planting can save about 20 percent on your current water bill, Ricker added.

Awards were given this year for single and multiple-family dwellings, public authority building landscaping and commercial landscaping. The City of Carmel won an Honorable Mention in the Public Authority category for its use of the large redwood tree and forest floor design around the tree at city hall.

The Casa de Oro, Monterey History and Art Association won first place in that category.

In the single family residential category, Carmel Valley homeowners were the big winners.

Besides the Franklin's first place award, an Award of Merit went to David and Norma Lewis in Carmel Valley Ranch for their garden designed by the Succulent Gardens in The Barnyard. The garden includes a wall sculpture created by artist Norma Lewis incorporating crassulas, echeverias and sedums.

Mount Shadows Condominiums in Monterey, landscaping designed by Tom Gaudoin, received an Honorable Mention in the multiple-family dwelling unit category (there was no first-place winner) and first place in Commercial Landscaping went to Cal-Mutual Life Insurance Co., designer Ernest Wilenmannn.

The Asilomar Conference Center in Pacific Grove received a Special Achievement Award for its efforts to remodel the center with low-water use fixtures and replant the gardens with drought-tolerant plants.

Judges for the event were Scott Hall, a landscape designer on the Carmel Forestry Commission, Tom Deyerle of D & B Landscaping in Carmel and Nancy Balderston, a landscape designer with Callander & Associates in Monterey.

Blood donors respond to drive

More than 70 blood donors responded to the requests for blood at the Red Cross/Community Hospital Bloodmobile held at the Carmel Valley Community Church Center.

Among those donating blood were 13 first-timers. Certificates were also awarded to longtime blood donors: Stephen Croswell, six gallons; Carlyle Mothersill, four gallons; Susan Augustitus and Donald Cummings, one gallon each.

Paul Eastman, Carmel-by-the-Sea chapter blood chairman, said the chapter was gratified by the turnout, which helped keep the peninsula blood supply from dwindling.

'Granny housing' issue on supervisors' agenda

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors is expected to discuss whether "granny housing" units should be restricted in Del Monte Forest when it meets Tuesday, June 24.

The issue probably will be addressed as supervisors discuss some clarification language concerning development densities in Del Monte Forest. The item is scheduled for 11:15 a.m.

According to staff planner Ray Lamb, granny housing units have not been included in the sewage allocation limits. Thus, the Pebble Beach Community Services District has been denying connection permits for granny units.

Lamb said supervisors basically have two options. One is change the sewage allocations in Pebble Beach to accommodate granny units. The other would be to simply ban granny units from the forest.

Another issue in the discussion concerns caretaker units. Language for the density restrictions is expected to be added concerning those units, he said.

Lamb indicated that there has been confusion in Pebble Beach over whether caretaker units should be subtracted from the maximum residential buildout allowed in the forest.

Lamb said that caretaker units would be subtracted from the maximum allowable units of 1,067.

In addition, the 80 condominiums at Spanish Bay also would be counted in the maximum buildout figures.

However, if supervisors want to keep granny housing in Pebble Beach, those units would not be subtracted from the buildout number because state law prohibits making those units part of growth controls, Lamb said.

Supervisors meet in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Fireworks banned on Fourth of July

THE FOURTH of July is fast approaching and once again the city of Carmel is girding itself for another all-out assault by revelers.

To prevent damage to private and public property, to prevent injuries to celebrants and to avoid the melee that occurred a few years ago, absolutely no fireworks of any kind, including the so-called "safe and sane" variety, will be allowed on Carmel Beach or within the city limits according to the Carmel Police Department.

In addition no alcoholic beverages will be allowed on the beach after 10 p.m.

Fires on the beach will only be allowed in areas west of a line reached by the high tide. No fires will be allowed within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or combustible materials. Materials being burned may not extend more than two feet above the base of the fire. Flames of the fire shall extend no more than five feet from the base.

No fires will be allowed on the beach after 10 p.m.

Carmel Bloodmobile a great success

Almost 80 pints of blood were collected at a recent Carmel Red Cross Bloodmobile drive.

The drive netted 78 pints of blood; 82 potential donors showed up, 11 of them first-timers.

Certificates were given to long-time donors: Elfriede Monaghan, 12 gallons; Lou Allaire, 10 gallons; Mae Eagleton, seven gallons; Lorraine Jays, three gallons; Deborah Vieille, two gallons; and John King, one gallon.

Blood drives are held at regular intervals. For more information contact the Carmel chapter at 624-6921.

CARMEL HYDRANTS ALMOST USELESS

The fact that Carmel's fire hydrants are almost useless was developed by the local fire department and a detailed report presented to the City Trustees at their meeting on Tuesday night.

Carmel's fire chief and his assistant made a series of pressure tests on Sunday morning, at a time when the pressure should register the maximum, and developed the startling fact that our hydrants are little more than decorations.

VETERANS OF CARMEL RICH WITH $50,000

Money has been rolling into Carmel this week, and the village has enjoyed vicariously the happiness and excitement of war veterans in their receipt of Adjusted Compensation bonds. With an estimated total value of $50,000, 107 packets of bonds were received Monday and Tuesday. A few worried veterans had not received their bonds by the middle of the week, probably because their applications were received late.

Returned to Postmaster Irene Cator to forward to San Francisco in exchange for treasury checks were bonds to the value of over $25,000; which presumably will go immediately into the channels of trade on the peninsula. Carmel veterans a re holding as an investment about an equal amount.

COUNCIL ACCEPTS NEW SALARY SCHEDULE

Carmel's city attorney was instructed by the council last night to prepare a resolution covering the new job classification and salary schedule for city employees, based on a study prepared for presentation at the same meeting by Clerk-Comptroller Lawrence Rose. Councilmen voted the action 4 to 1, with Gunnar Norberg dissenting.

Under it, the city will lay out an annual total of $191,748 in salaries next year, compared to $185,556 last year, an increase of $6,192, or 3.34 percent.

The study, which seeks to eliminate inequities and ambiguity in the city's pay structure, was accepted for incorporation in the resolution as presented, with one minor change, an across-the-board $5 increase on a classification including the jobs of police sergeant, fire engineer, field mechanic and assistant building inspector.

NATIVE PLANT SOCIETY

It is not unusual for a Carmel citizen to seek permission from the city council to cut down a tree or even to prune it. Few towns have offered as much protection to their trees and plants as Carmel. Perhaps this explains, at least in part, why there are so many lovers of plants and trees in and around Carmel.

One group dedicated to preserving the native flora, not only of Carmel and the peninsula, but all of California, is the Native Plant Society.

Though there are 15 chapters in the state, the Monterey chapter is considered one of the most active. Not only is it rich in plants but it is rich in membership too. The 13-member chapter includes: Lester Rountree, one of the founders of the society; nature photographer, Ansel Adams and the botanist-conservationist Beatrice Howitt.

TOWN HALL MEETING ON PROPOSED AIRPORT CONDOS

Developers of the proposed 110-unit condominium project will meet with Valley residents at a "town hall" meeting at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, June 18 at the Carmel Valley Community Center on Ford Road.

County supervisors last week ordered the issuance of an environmental impact report for the project, although county health and planning officials have expressed serious reservations about sewage disposal and density problems at the site.

Goodwill station makes Valley visit

The Goodwill Industries' "Attended Donation Station" will make its semi-annual one-month visit to Carmel Mid Valley (from June 18) to receive donated clothing, furniture and other household items.

Installed at the Carmel Mid Valley Shopping Center at Carmel Valley Road and Berwick Drive, the trailer will be open seven days a week until July 17, from 10:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. and 1:30 until 5 p.m., with a Goodwill attendant on hand to assist and provide a receipt.

Donors are urged to come during attended hours, to get their receipts and to ensure that donations get to Goodwill, in good condition (donations left when the trailer is unattended are in violation of civil code and run the chance of damage).

For donations too large or heavy to bring to the Attended Donation Station, donors can arrange for home pickup by phoning 646-8567.

BUSINESS BEAT
BY NANCY HILLS

Hard work and hardware

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS in business around Carmel is cause enough to celebrate, but 25 years as a non-tourist-oriented business is cause to hire a Dixieland band and give away a Volkswagen Bug.

Brinton's, an eclectic home needs store in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, is doing just that because they qualify for both those distinctions — 25 years and a non-tourist-oriented business.

What's more, it's also Richard Brinton's 25th wedding anniversary.

So this Saturday, June 21, there will be a Dixieland band, and on June 29 a giveaway of a Volkswagen convertible classic along with many other prizes. You can even get fat. They will be demonstrating an ice cream maker and with that goes free samples.

Richard Brinton founded the store, which he says his wife Mary describes as a "home-oriented department store" in 1961. That was the same year they got married. Busy, busy.

The store has done nothing but grow, Brinton said, since the days it was the third business to move into the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. Last year, they expanded into a vacated store next door.

One might wonder if Brinton's success is due to calling his former college roommate and now pro baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth for advice, but he said he considers much of it comes from what his parents taught him. They owned a hardware store in San Jose, where Brinton apprenticed.

He was "well-trained" in retail, he said, and his father taught him to have integrity with his customers. Much of the success of the store has to do with maintaining that customer service-oriented philosophy.

The store sells items for the home that range from hardware to a bath shop to crystal and glass giftware. No furniture, though, except the outdoor patio kind.

ICE CREAM MELTDOWN

Actually, this should go first because it's rather important, but I'm so tired of ICE CREAM STORIES, I never will eat another cone. But the city is about to be sued again — and it all has to do with that innocent confection.

YES, THERE is another one home like her, but it's pretty fair distance from here. Henrietta Walker, owner of Rietta Co. USA, a sweater and fur shop in The Mall on San Carlos Street, has a twin sister back in Denmark. They both knit and the shop sells sweaters as well as Scandinavian furs.

William Lawson has withdrawn his use permit application for a takeout ice cream parlor to replace Harold Wamsley's Carmel Barbershop on San Carlos Street near Ocean Avenue. The size of the location prohibits customer seating. In its place he is filing a lawsuit against the city.

Lawson was part-owner of Swensen's Ice Cream Parlor on Ocean Avenue near the corner of Mission Street that was turned into J.J.'s shoes last year. Lawson has been looking for a place to relocate since he lost his lease in the Swensen's spot. He had to find a space that would use as much water as an ice cream parlor, according to the city water ordinance.

Now, Lawson's attorney, Hugo Gerstl, has filed a Notice of Claim for at least $1 million against the city of Carmel. The city council must review and either reject or accept the claim for the suit to proceed.

Lawson claims the planning department had told him last year he could not relocate onto Ocean Avenue when he inquired about the sale of Wishart's Bakery space, according to Gerstl, but now Michael Montana (also a part-owner of J.J.'s shoes) has applied to put an ice cream parlor in the same space.

Though Montana's lease and sale of the business is tied up in litigation between Richard Pepe, who tried to purchase the business last year, and Wishart owner Frank Garnero, the proposed ice cream parlor with seating appears to meet code requirements.

Meanwhile, Lawson's proposed takeout-only parlor might not meet the current code or the proposed new ice cream ordinance the city council and planning commission is working on. Though the new ordinance is intended to relieve some of the restrictions that make approval of an ice cream parlor difficult in Carmel, exclusively-takeout eateries remain illegal in both current and proposed city codes.

Additionally, Lawson said he filed his application for the barbershop in February and it has not been ruled on yet, so Gerstl said he has filed for loss of revenue. He said even if Lawson received approval now, he would have lost income from the busy summer season. That revenue adds up to about $1 million, Gerstl claims.

The application was first filed Feb. 21, so according to Planning Director Diane White it missed getting on the Feb. 24 land use committee meeting agenda.

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL

BY MARY WALTER

Pine Inn wins it

FINAL BRONCO standings: Pine Inn, 13-2; Derek Rayne, 10-5; Carmel Valley Disposal, 4-11; La Playa, 3-12.

The hits were flying as Carmel Valley Disposal upset second-place Derek Rayne in a convincing 18-11 victory June 9. CVD blasted off to a strong start as Chad Christensen and Sky Feekes each belted a home run to contribute to CVD's 9-2 lead in the second inning. Derek Rayne countered with seven runs in the fourth, but CVD pushed ahead again to catch and hold the lead. Leading hitters: for CVD, Brooks Juhring (5-for-5), Christensen, Feekes and Alex Stott (each with three hits); for Derek Rayne, Steve Biliouris and Frank Melicia. Christensen, Feekes and Corey Wardell pitched for the winners.

Pine Inn beat La Playa 12-6 on June 10 to clinch their division title. Pitchers Danny Higgins and Clas Brown led Pine Inn's hitting (each 2-for-3); Jon Bohlman led for La Playa. Other key hits: Ceete Cusimano, Cory Lauterbach (Pine Inn); Dennis Sketchley, Bain Smith and Andrew Kylander-Clark (La Playa). Good gloves belonged to Brian Sarkin, Brian Kingsley (Pine Inn) and Matt Travaille (La Playa).

On Saturday, Pine Inn and Derek Rayne faced off in an exciting, extra-inning contest which Pine Inn narrowly won, 8-7. Derek Rayne held the lead from the start until key hits by Mario Bertolucci and starting pitcher Danny Higgins tied the score at 6-6 in the seventh. Derek Rayne's Lee Walton drove in teammate Tim Wiesner with a triple in the top of the eighth, but Pine Inn rallied back to win the game with a pair of runs scored by Cody West and Mike Downing.

Carmel Valley Disposal beat La Playa 12-5 on Saturday in a game highlighted by yet another home run (his fourth) by CVD's Brooks Juhring, making him the Bronco Division home run leader.

In Mustang action Saturday, Dick Bruhn beat Books, Inc., 15-11. Dick Bruhn's Chris Watkins (3-for-3) and Michael Palshaw (2-for-3 with a double) led their team in great fielding as well as hitting.

Serving the Monterey Peninsula for 23 Years

BUSINESS BEAT

It was reviewed by the committee in March. The application was first heard by the planning commission on April 23, when it was continued at Lawson's request because the commission was then in the process of putting together a new ordinance affecting ice cream parlors and the law could have changed. Under the current code, the application would be denied.

The Carmel City Council reviewed the new law on June 3, but sent it back to the planning commission for revisions. Lawson's application also was continued again on May 28 because there were not enough commissioners present to rule on a use permit.

In the June 11 planning commission meeting, the first for the newly-appointed planning commissioners, Lawson told the commission he was withdrawing the application on the advice of his attorney and filing a lawsuit against the city.

Just another day in paradise.

KNIT-ONE, PEARL-TWO

I don't think I could even hold a knitting needle when I was 6 years old, but apparently Henrietta Walker could.

That's the age Walker said she learned to knit in her native Denmark. The skill has come in handy and she has opened her own sweater and fur shop, Rietta Co. USA, here in Carmel.

The shop has taken over the former location of Ballena Bay Pewter Co. in The Mall on San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues. That's where Jack London's Bar & Grill is located. (I cannot TELL you what a pain it is not to have addresses when writing up these locations.)

Walker owns the business with her husband Reese Walker, a Professional Golfers' Association golfer. He's not a tour golfer, she said, but works promotions and special events.

The shop sells sweaters hand-knit and designed by Walker herself, as well as sweaters made by her mother, twin sister and other knitters in their company back in Denmark, she explained. They own a "small" company there, Walker said, which wholesales their creations and makes them for the new shop in Carmel.

The sweaters are not what most Americans would think of as traditional Scandinavian-style apparel, but are very contemporary with range of materials — everything from silk, cotton, angora, brushed mohair and — believe it or not — leather.

Not content with keeping people here warm and stylish with wool, Walker also sells Scandinavian furs. The selection ranges from full-length mink coats to jackets of all lengths. She said she can order anything the customer wants. They can get here very fast, she added, sometimes in only two days.

While Walker said she does not want to start making custom designs, she does hope to make more one-of-a-kind sweaters. She also doesn't give lessons. Not enough time.

If you don't believe she really knits, go by The Mall. On a nice day you might find her outside, as I did, just pearling away.

CARMEL PLAZA GOES BANANAS

Get ready to go on safari, Carmel. Banana Republic clothing store is apparently moving into the Carmel Plaza, according to my "informed sources." Just when is not settled yet, but I hear the store will take one of a 2,200 sq. ft. new space built in the former Bank of America location.

For those who don't know Banana Republic, the description on its catalogue reads: "Exotic and eccentric clothing customs from around the world plus sartorial tips for travelers and our natural-fabric safari gear from warm-weather journeys."

I think that's meant to describe the catalogue, but you get the gist of it.

Also allegedly going into the Plaza will be a Casswell-Massey store, the oldest apothecary in the United States I've been told. It sells all kinds of grooming goodies.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

BY HENRIETTA STERN

Weather and water supply

We live in an area of variable rainfall, and therefore variable water supply. Unlike many other areas of California, we are completely dependent on local supply to meet our water needs. We obtain water from three basic sources: 1. runoff in the Carmel River Basin, 2. ground water in the Carmel Valley Aquifer, and 3. ground water in the Seaside Aquifer.

Los Padres and San Clemente reservoirs store Carmel River water, and production wells pump ground water from the aquifers. The combined usable storage capacity of the two reservoirs totals about 2,800 acre-feet. (An acre-foot is the amount of water that would cover one surface acre one foot deep, and is equivalent to about 325,000 gallons.) Fifteen active production wells pump ground water from the Carmel Valley Basin.

The fickleness of Mother Nature is dramatically shown in the rainfall records of the past 15 years. The year 1977 was the driest on record (9.9 inches), while rainfall exceeded 40 inches a few years later in 1983. Longtime residents no doubt remember the impact rain has on our community— scorched lawns and the rigors of water rationing during the 1976-77 drought; extensive property damage along the Carmel River resulting from El Nino's floods in 1982-83.

Rainfall in the area served by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District averages about 19 inches per year, though annual rainfall of 14 to 22 inches is not uncommon. In terms of water supply, we are more concerned with dry years, their frequency, intensity and duration.

According to local records, only four severe dry periods have occurred in the past 80 years. What happens in a dry year? First, normal stream flows are diminished and the natural underground water reservoir does not become fully recharged. Two dry years in a row deplete existing surface reservoirs, draw heavily on the ground water reserves, and degrade the river's rich vegetation, fish and wildlife resources.

MORE PEOPLE DEMAND MORE WATER

Projected demand is increasing faster than available supply. Total water consumption in the district is nearly 20,000 ac.-ft. per year, while present supply totals 23,000 ac.-ft. If no new water is developed, previous research suggests projected demand will meet estimated supply by the year 1995. And if a drought similar to the 1976-77 event were to occur today, current production facilities might fall short of demand by 17 percent. The district is completing a sophisticated computer model in addition to detailed water demand projections that will enable us to more accurately assess the situation and plan for future needs.

NEW SAN CLEMENTE DAM

Given this scenario, augmenting our water supply and providing drought reserves, while protecting our valuable fish and wildlife resources, is the district's foremost priority. After evaluating many alternatives, the district has proposed a 29,000 ac.-ft. roller-compacted concrete ("rollcrete") dam near the site of the present San Clemente Dam. The new dam would cost about $46 million to construct and would yield at least 3,500 ac.-ft. of new water for planned development in addition to water for drought protection and environmental enhancement. An election to approve dam construction and financing is scheduled for November 1987. Future columns will discuss the many activities leading up to the vote.

MEETINGS OF INTEREST

The second in a series of public workshops on the proposed San Clemente Project is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 2 in the Seaside City Council Chambers. Converse Consultants will present their revised preliminary design and cost estimates for the new dam. Come and learn about its location, dimensions, fish facilities, hydroelectric power potential, construction method, safety standards, costs and more. Bring those questions you've always had but didn't know who to ask!

(Editor's note: The Carmel River Water News is a bi-monthly column written by Monterey Peninsula Water Management District staff. Its purpose is to inform Pine Cone readers about district activities relating to the Carmel River and its environs. For more information or suggested topics, readers are invited to contact Henrietta Stern at 649-4866 or P.O. Box 85, Monterey 93940.)

KIDS' BEAT

BY CAROLE COLTER

A fund-raising extravaganza

An extravaganza is what it will be! As you enter the CYC the evening of the 28th, you will be met by sweet sounds of music coming from the ivories. Professional pianist Serena Underwood has donated her talents to help make our grand night a success. We think she's wonderful.

The CYC will be a new spot after Pat Yates and her decorating committee get finished with their task. Pat has a reputation for doing the best. We love you Pat for always saying yes when we need you.

No one will leave the CYC that night without a prize, thanks to our hard-working prize chairman Cathleen Connell and our board members. Of course President Ron Faia will be busy entertaining all his guests and setting an example for the rest of us. Not his wife Susie though; she has given up her night of fun with her hubby, to donate her talents by preparing a gourmet dinner for us.

"If you know Susie like I know Susie," the food will be delicious! I'm hungry! "Ron, save a seat for Susie and let the kids do the dishes." Did I say kids?— That's right— the kids will be there to serve dinner and catch a little excitement from the evening.

The Big Night is coming about only through the leadership of our brave fund-raising chairman, Lou Langley. This lady is one-in-a-million and seems to fill all her waking hours with good deeds. Her husband Jim will be there too with his constant support. What a team! Carmel, you are so lucky to have such great volunteers and the CYC has grabbed their much-needed attention.

Call 646-5331, we may have a ticket left for you. If not, grab a board member and bend his arm for next year. We are limited to the sale of 100 tickets— 200 guests for the night.

This will also be our farewell night to our director, Carole Colter, who will be leaving us for a venture into the real estate business. We wish her luck and want to thank her for the progress she made for CYC this year, in the direction of promotion and good will. We applaud her for having the courage to try something new with us last year, even though she was uncertain of the outcome. Knowing she will be leaving a bit of her heart at CYC, we look forward to her visits back to see us from time to time.

How about the CYC kids? What are they up to? Mostly in a state of limbo and just dropping in, as they have always done. They are waiting to hear, too, what changes are going to be made at the CYC. After all, this is their hangout. We can only say this right now, we will be closed June 23-29 for cleaning and party preparations.

Our new summer hours, effective June 30, will be: Monday-Thursday 12-7 p.m., Friday, 12-10 p.m., Saturday 12-12 and closed on Sunday. We will have some familiar faces around to keep them occupied and feeling at home. After hearing from the city next week, we hope to give you more details.

Hand and arm strength are key ingredients in the success of a wheelchair road racer. Colleen Sweet of Carmel Valley works out at Chamisal readying for the San Francisco Marathon July 20.

Photographs by Holly McFarland

"Before, he would leave me to go do a workout and I'd feel real left out." Today, wheelchair road racer Colleen Sweet and husband Randy can work together getting into shape for marathons.

No handicap here

The lark proved prophetic as Sweet captured a second place in the 1976 National Games sponsored by the National Wheelchair Athletic Association.

From there, Sweet became hooked on road racing.

"It was like someone had given me legs on wings," she said.

As in any sport, conditioning is as important as raw skill. Sweet had to take that ability and mold it into a competitive style.

Sweet follows a rigid routine of exercises, including swimming and pumping iron at Chamisal Tennis Club, aerobics at home and long rides in the wheelchair with Randy jogging by her side. "He's pretty much my inspiration. He's my personal coach."

Balancing one's strength is important in wheelchair racing, she said. "You never want to get one part stronger than the other part."

Timing also is important. As one of her mentors, Peter Brooks of San Luis Obispo, puts it, "When you're swinging at the ball you have to hit the ball just at the right time. Each stroke is important. Where your body is and how you hit that rim is important."

In racing, endurance and leg strength are the primary important components. In wheelchair racing it is the arms and hands that can make or break a competitor.

To protect her hands, Sweet uses baseball batting gloves so heavily taped that they resemble white boxing gloves. At speeds of up to 35 mph, maximum control through the arms and hands is a necessity.

MORE IMPORTANTLY, high-tech designs have led to improvements in sports equipment, from Nautilus for weightlifter Yanko Rusev to lightweight running shoes for Edwin Moses.

Such is the case for wheelchair racers, who have graduated from clunky and heavy wheelchairs to a more streamlined version that has helped halve times in marathons over just the past few years.

Sweet's wheelchair has 27-inch bicycle tires in the back and 18-inchers up front with a hand brake. It weighs about as much as a bicycle.

The wheelchair is steered by a pole in the middle called an equalizer. Or, "a lot of body English," Sweet explained. "Body English is a fine technique of the sport."

Despite advancement in the sport and a growing public awareness that handicaps don't mean a sedentary life, there still is reluctance on the part of some race organizers to open a wheelchair division.

The Big Sur Marathon in its initial running was closed to wheelchair athletes, basically because organizers were fearful of injuries. The course features include steep cliffs, stiff winds and long hills.

But the potential danger of a course shouldn't deter allowing wheelchair entrants, Sweet insists.

"There's always danger in any sport. The rules of the road is the runner has the right of way. The hope is that athletes will have courtesy no matter whether you're able-bodied."

Sweet also believes that wheelchair athletes have a responsibility to demonstrate that the handicapped can lead a full healthy and active life.

"Being in a wheelchair and being visible in a real able way is important — letting people see that a handicap is only what you consider it, only what you keep in your mind," she said.

And her advice to others is not limited to the handicapped.

"It's the same advice I'd give to anybody: To get as much out of life. Balance is important. Part of that balance is physical exercise...For a disabled person: Quit thinking disabled. Disabled is in your mind."

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

Surfin' Carmel

Russ Harris, who is known as the "Silver Fox" and runs the Gold Fork Restaurant for Restaurants Central, has volunteered to work on the campaign committee for the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. The campaign goal is to raise $24,000. Russ will be assisting Francis Sparolini and Clay Larson.

CARMEL SURFING

It was a nip-and-tuck battle all the way, but Ed Guzman of Monterey was victorious over Carmel's Marc Cross at the Seventh Annual Monterey County Surfabout held at Carmel Beach last Sunday. Four-time winner Mark lost by a single point to Guzman when both failed to make it into the finals of the Master's short board competition. All Cross had to do for a victory was to place at least in sixth position for a win but this was not to happen. Cross won the men's longboard, took second in the kneeboard and placed third in the senior boogie board. Scott Lundy of Carmel won the Master's short board as day was closing and gave up his final try when he lost a contact lens in the surf.

The closest match other than the one between Guzman and Cross was in the Grand Master's short board which saw Mike Lapin of Carmel edge past Seaside's Eric Sanico. Both were tied at five waves and also at six. Lapin won it on the seventh wave in the 35-and-over group.

In the women's event (and there was only one), it was Carmel's Alexis Thomas winning the short board over Anne Spaulding of Carmel and Jennifer Maggio of Monterey. The weather was beautiful for Surfabout and the crowd just as great. Here's looking to next year.

CLEANING UP

Would you like to make it four? John and Eileen King have purchased their third cleaning establishment. They've just purchased the El Rancho Coin Laundry on Reservation Road in Marina. This makes three for them. The others are in the Monte Vista Shopping Center on Soledad in Monterey and the Carmel Coin Wash on Junipero and Third in Carmel.

HERE AND THERE

Bonnie Payne has given her notice as hostess at Rancho Canada to join the new crew at Tony's in downtown Monterey, scheduled to open tomorrow. Tony's is the location of the former Brasserie owned by Walter Becker (Hog's and Márquis) on Alvarado and Del Monte and will be a steak and ribs restaurant. Bonnie will be the daytime dining room manager. Rancho's loss is Tony's gain. Best of luck to Tony and the crew. Tony Salomeh is also owner of Anton & Michel and Fish House on the Park in Carmel.

Cimmaron Conway has been chosen to play the part of John Steinbeck in a local TV production. The company is known as Arthurian Productions and the film will be shown on PBS. The cowboy hat has to go, Cimmaron!

PERSEVERANCE PAYS OFF

Ran into little Margurite Alvarez and all the plans she spoke of a few seasons back have come to fruition. At that time she spoke of starting a nurse home care service for this area and she's accomplished what she set out to do. Margurite is part owner of Country Home Care with two active offices . . . one in Carmel and one in Salinas. In addition, she and her partner Judy Gates have purchased a home in Mid-Valley which has been converted to County Residential Care where they have six full-time residents over the age of 62. Miss Alvarez is also involved with the Bureau of Personnel Services, having chaired that group since January of this year. The object of this group is to provide consumer protection for those home-bound people that look to agencies for referral of appropriately trained and referenced nursing personnel. all these facets of course, with the State of California sanctions.

TOO MUCH MONEY

Tom Hanlon just resigned his position as head of the Visitor and Convention Bureau in Palm Springs to accept the same position in Ft. Worth. Seems as though the city fathers couldn't handle his salary of $94,000 a year. His new post will pay $120,000. Now all the knowledge and contacts he's made for more than 18 years will benefit the Texans. City fathers must learn you have to pay for talent. Tom was formerly with the Nevada Power Co. and Visitor and Convention Bureau of Las Vegas.

CLINT'S BUDDY

Ray Floyd, who usually teams with Clint Eastwood in the Crosby (or AT&T) finally won the golf tournament which has eluded him for many years, the U. S. Open. Ray had previously won two PGA crowns and the Masters in more than 20 years on the tour. When he first appeared on the tour as a brash 17-year-old pro, Ray cavorted with Doug Sanders and a bevy of beauties. His game suffered until he married an Italian-American stew and she straightened him out . . . either work hard and become the golfer you're qualified to be, or get off the tour.

Well, with that ultimatum, you know the results. Next goal for Ray, the British Open, which will give him all the majors. I think the unruly crowd on the third day upset Greg Norman's play. Now you know why Europeans call us "The Ugly Americans."

LEND AN EAR

If you have a radio handy, give a listen to yours truly on KRML starting this Saturday night at 6 . . . I will be spinning some light jazz discs and talking about a few of your friends. It's 1410 on your radio smile! Give a listen.

Til next week . . .

MUSEUM HOLDS TENTH ANNUAL "BETTER-THAN-USUAL SALE"

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is gearing up for its 10th annual "Better-Than-Usual Sale" Saturday, June 21— three months earlier than originally planned.

They've lost their regular working location and must be ready for this major event in a matter of days! However, they promise to maintain high standards for their merchandise: rare books, 18th and 19th century collectibles, quality furniture, china and art are available (dealers and decorators take note!). There are also lots of crafts, household items, new and used adult and children's clothing, records, books and more!

The sale will take place at the Del Monte School, Casa Verde near Del Monte Blvd. Saturday, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. There are plenty of parking spaces on the playground and on surrounding streets. From Highway 1, take the Casa Verde off-ramp and go toward Del Monte Boulevard. Watch for the balloons!

All proceeds from the sale benefit the operating fund of the museum. Your benefits will be the bargains you'll find at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art one day only "Better-Than-Usual Sale."

RED CROSS ANNUAL DINNER MEETING JUNE 24

The annual dinner meeting of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American Red Cross will be held at 6 p.m. on June 24 at the Pine Inn in Carmel at Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde with Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman as its guest speaker.

The event will be held to celebrate an awards ceremony, elect officers and commemorate the beginning of the chapter's 70th year and the 105th for the American Red Cross.

The Red Cross has proven to be a powerful asset to the communities it serves. Assistance is given and not loaned. No repayment of any kind is asked or expected. Frequently assistance is given to large numbers of people on a mass-care basis, but whenever possible the Red Cross deals directly with each family on an individual basis.

The Red Cross provides food, clothing, shelter, blood and blood products, and medical and nursing or hospital care on the basis of evident need.

A chapter is the basic organizational unit of the Red Cross. There are more than 2,900 chapters in the U.S. Each one is a key resource. They are classified according to population, ranging from 500,000 and over to under 10,000. Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter is listed under the last but is probably the most proud. Call 624-6921 for information.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"You can toboggan into old age before 50, or you can glide gently, almost imperceptibly, down a gradual slope of years into your 70s. But the time for a woman to begin cheating old age is before she begins cheating on the number of candles on her birthday cake."

—Clare Booth Luce

Students at Public School 20 in Staten Island, NY, recently threw a birthday party at their school for a resident of the local community whom they admire. Dancing up a storm at the party was the birthday girl herself, Mrs. Johanna Walter, who said "you're only as old as you feel, and today I feel young!" She and the children were celebrating her 102nd birthday.

POWDERY PLUMES of snow are formed by high winds off the peak of Mt. Everest, a peak that has tested the limits of endurance for Carmel sports psychologist Curt Erickson.

DR. CURT Erickson, a sports psychologist, ponders his next steps as he scales a peak in preparation for an 18-member mountaineering assault on Mt. Everest.

Carmel sports psychologist seeks 'peak performance'

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A MOUNT EVEREST-sized word — anthromaximology — the study of the upper limit of human performance — expresses the work of Carmel sports psychologist Curt S. Erickson.

Venturing beyond the textbook or office, Erickson tested the limits of his own endurance. He was one of a team of 18 climbers who ascended Mount Everest.

"That mountain was really a metaphor," said Erickson, now at home in the relatively flat Carmel Valley. "It was a metaphor for challenge."

In his local practice, Erickson counsels families, individuals, couples and organizations who seek to attain "peak performance." He also has served as sports psychologist for the U.S. figure skating and gymnastics teams that compete in the Olympics.

Whether a goal is athletic or intellectual, mental priming is key to its attainment, Erickson will tell you. His own journey up the world's highest mountain confirmed what he long believed.

As though he were preparing to compete in a marathon, Erickson trained two to three hours daily for four months prior to the autumn 1985 climb.

"The Nepalese government allows three climbs in the fall," he explained, "and no climbing in the winter. The weather is just too savage."

Erickson bicycled, lifted weights and ran, particularly backwards, to prepare for the assault on the 29,800-foot peak. But true to his own studies, he also prepared his mind for the challenge.

"Equally important is to train psychologically. You must learn to have intense concentration. Up there the weather is extremely cold, 10 to 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Avalanches are occurring every hour. You must focus on what you have to do. Much like everyday life, people must have this ability to focus."

Erickson's fellow climbers represented assorted vocations and arrived from around the United States. The team was composed of an almost equal proportion of men and women.

"This is part of what I think of as optimum performance — people having similar qualities, a kind of single-minded vision. It's something they all wanted to do for a long period, the supreme challenge. The common mission was to find out what you're made up of as a man or a woman."

The team members were mentally and physically hyped for their "common mission" upon arrival in Katmandu, the capital of Nepal. Erickson's function as team sports psychologist was to "bring more cohesiveness" to the group.

"The problems were the women wanted to 'smell the flowers,' to enjoy the trek. And the men wanted to rush to the top," he observed.

The Mount Everest base camp is located at the 18,000-foot level, he said. A crew of Sherpas, Tibetan mountain climbers, carried the heavy loads. The American climbers struggled to become acclimated to the mountain.

"Because of the altitude, sleeping was a major problem. If you can't sleep, you're much more inclined to get altitude sickness. At high altitudes men age faster and women tended to feel they were more beautiful. Above 18,000 feet they tended to look more youthful while men looked more haggard."

If ice fields or glaciers were in their path, the climbers' day typically began at 2 a.m. — "when it's safest."

"Everything's frozen, but once the sun comes out things start to melt and the ice constantly shifts," Erickson explained. "There are crevasses 30 to 200 feet deep. You're roped up when in the ice fields, and constantly have to keep your mind on not being disturbed by the avalanche."

Erickson moved to the peninsula two months ago. He undertook his Everest training while still residing in the Colorado mountains.

One form of altitude sickness Erickson was able to pinpoint is "analysis paralysis."

"It happens when too much information overwhelms you. That can happen within a lot of families, and to business people and professionals."

The psychological benefits of the climb were many, he added.

"You're being challenged virtually every day just because of the high altitude. Letting go of anger and blame was one of the first things we took back home. We also gained the ability to deal with chaos and ambiguity."

Erickson noted that his climbing team saw very positive role models in the Sherpas who carried their heavy loads.

He described the Sherpas as "more flexible on a day-to-day basis. They use humor. They're more positive, even though there may be despair around them."

This lesson was brought home to the psychologist when the team encountered a six-year-old Sherpa girl, Sawah. The child had lost her leg during a horse fall, and the team carried her 125 miles to her home in the mountains.

"We carried Sawah in a basket," he recalled. "She brought the group together. She was the most cohesive force. She was always smiling and laughing. Children can teach adults so much. She was the teacher; she was the sports psychologist. She made our problems seem so light."

Erickson's journey up Everest was cut short at 21,000 feet up the mountain.

"I broke my wrist in the spindrift from an avalanche — the flying debris. The group went a little further, but stopped. The avalanche was just too intense."

Having faced the challenge, Erickson said he would like to try it again.

"I would be up for it. I'd like to go about every three years. It gets you refocused on what's important in life."

Carmel art galleries join forces for art and music

FINE ART and music will join forces during a Friday, June 20 benefit in Carmel for The Monterey Bay Symphony Association.

Fifteen Carmel art galleries will open their doors during this evening of art viewing, concertizing, a reception at the Carmel Art Association and an auction of original artwork.

Each of the participating galleries is located within a one-block radius on either Dolores Street or Sixth Avenue in downtown Carmel. According to event chairman Betty Jo Cost, owner of the James Peter Cost Gallery, Friday's "Evening of Fine Art and Fine Music" is designed to become a yearly affair.

"There are some local merchants who have supported the symphony and I'm very concerned that they get some of the funds due them. That led me to think of a unique type of fund-raiser. This is a first, but we hope to make it an annual event," Cost noted. "Hopefully different galleries will participate next year. Perhaps we could offer it south of Ocean Avenue."

Ushers dressed in tuxedoes will assist tour-goers. The galleries will be open 7 to 9 p.m. for the benefit. Artists and in some cases gallery owners will greet their visitors.

The following Carmel galleries will participate in the tour. Each is located on Dolores Street or Sixth Avenue and bounded by Ocean and Fifth avenues or San Carlos and Lincoln streets. The galleries and their hosts are:

Bevier Gallery, Jack Bevier; Bill W. Dodge Gallery, Bill Dodge; Douglas Purdy Gallery, Emily Purdy;

Fireside Gallery, Gerald F. Brommer; First Impressions, Barbara Linhard; G.S. Hill Gallery, Christine Woodruff;

James Peter Cost Gallery, James Peter Cost and Shelley Anne Cost; Lindsey Gallery, Bill Lindsey; Loran Speck Gallery, Loran Speck;

Lupetti Gallery, Lynn Lupetti and Lesley Harrison; New Masters Gallery, Will Bullas and Keith Lindberg; Rose Rock Gallery, Michael Starring;

Stilwell Gallery, Alison Stilwell; Weston Gallery, Russ Anderson; Who's Who in Art Gallery, Donald Teague.

Ensembles from the Monterey Bay Symphony will perform at various galleries. At 9 p.m., the event moves to the galleries of the Carmel Art Association where wine and food will be served and an auction of original artwork will be conducted.

"Each gallery is contributing an original work of art," Cost said. "A silent auction will take place at each gallery as people make the tour."

Admission to An Evening of Fine Art and Fine Music will be $15 per person, $25 per couple, in advance. Admission at the door is $20 per person or $30 per couple. Tax-deductible checks should be made out to the Monterey Bay Symphony.

For additional information or reservations, call 372-6276, or 624-2163.

THEATER REVIEW
BY ANNE PAPINEAU

'Miss Firecracker' at Western Stage

THE MISS FIRECRACKER Contest, currently in performance at Hartnell College's Western Stage in Salinas, is comic drama in prize-winning playwright Beth Henley's vintage Southern style, with wretched emotional excess masking insincerity (fulsome greetings, interminable partings, hysterical praise) and characters so idiosyncratic and broadly drawn that they are intrinsically funny, even when they don't mean to be.

Directed by Alan Cook and produced with the Western Stage's dependably high production values, The Miss Firecracker Contest opens a window on the very small world of Brookhaven, Mississippi and lets us in on the growing pains of three people at turning points in their lives — Carnelle Scott (Joy Camp) and her cousins-cum-siblings Elaine (Pennie Nichols) and Delmont (Michael Kubik).

Maybe you would not select a county fair beauty contest as the arena for outclassing the Mississippi townspeople who have looked down on you all your sad little life. Fine. But you aren't stuck with living down being dumped, at nine, complete with ringworm, at the home of your uppity aunt, who already has a girl and a boy and needs you like, well, ringworm, or the sleazy nickname you earned by sleeping around in your youthful, misguided attempt to win popularity. And you are not, this very now, living like a leftover in the house of your newly dead aunt, on the road, so to say, to nowhere.

But Carnelle Scott is, and given the limits of her frame of reference, winning the Miss Firecracker Contest seems like just the recipe for leaving town "in a blaze of crimson glory." The fact that Carnelle's cousin Elaine won the contest a few years back ups the ante — Elaine always was the pretty one. Carnelle's trials and tribulations with the contest frame the deeper matter of the play, namely, the way adult siblings, returned to the space they grew up in, universally replay the conflicts and pecking order that formed their character and, in the process, do some growing.

Joy Camp's Carnelle is lanky, awkward, and unsinkable; at 24, she is still the abandoned waif working hard to be loved and accepted. Pennie Nichols' Elaine has all the confidence and grace of a favored daughter as well as the condescension. "Remember," she encourages Carnelle, "Mama was at her most noble when she was least attractive." And Michael Kubik's Delmount is a combination Deputy Dawg-Lord Byron, conveying with growls and tortured expressions the dark matter of his troubled spirit.

Some of this show's finest comic moments are created by Moray Koontz as Popeye Jackson, a skinny, extremely nearsighted seamstress whose transports of passion and myopic postures add up to a winsome, endearing character. Taft Miller, as a sickly carnival barker, and Trish Horsley gotten up as a grossly unattractive manhunter round things out nicely.

Although The Miss Firecracker Contest is not in the same league with playwright Henley's prize-winning play Crimes of the Heart, it offers many of the same elements — people who engage our interest in an outlandish setting that allows humor to carry the weight of its deeper themes.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

MPC's 'American Buffalo'

IF YOU ARE up for a teeth-rattling, intense theater experience, hotfoot it to the SRO Theater at Monterey Peninsula College for a sizzling production of David Mamet's American Buffalo.

Written in late 1975, in the aftermath of the Nixon-Watergate era and the Vietnam War, American Buffalo almost explodes on the stage with the playwright's anger, disappointment, and frustration at the perversion of communication and the failed ideals of American life. But make no mistake: if you dislike inventively obscene language and relentless, emotion-charged argument, stay away because American Buffalo, a New York Drama Critics Award-winner, is a demanding play to sit through that makes its points through characters few Monterey Peninsulans are likely to identify with.

Enter Don's Resale Shop, a minor boil on the rotting carcass of Chicago's inner city, and meet the principals of American Buffalo. There is Donny Dubrow (Alexey Lopukhin), proprietor and petty thief, casing the household of a coin-buying customer in the hopes of scoring a big hit. Bobby (Michael Lojkovic), is a hapless, semi-recovered junkie dependent on Donny's curiously tender brand of fathering for breakfast, pocket money, and a place to be somebody. And teach (Larry Welch), a slightly bigger league robber who menaces both of them.

Notice this little world in detail — the run-down junk shop, the angry, ineffectual people — because you are not going to leave it, for a single moment, in the next two hours. And while you are there, you are going to experience, along with the play's characters, the intense frustration of purposeless emotion, gratuitous violence, and a torrent of energy-laden argument that rarely amounts to communication.

American Buffalo is a powerful statement on noncommunication and the poison it produces. In this play, the people structure time by venting anger at the absent on the present, jockeying for position in a pecking order that seems meaningless, and putting themselves (and us) through a great deal of emotional turmoil only to end where they began.

Larry Welch's Teach is compounded of anger, frustration, and outworn patterns of speech that keep him, and those he talks with, in a state of intense frustration.

"I'm a businessman here to do business," he insists. "I'm here to face facts." The facts are never clear because Teach's few communicative remarks are sideswiped by disclaimers (" ... and I'm not saying anything here") or lost in argument. Larry Welch is entirely believable in this role of greasy, manic street punk percolating violence.

As the junk shop proprietor who structures time by dealing with Teach and shepherding Bobby into a life of minor crime, Alexey Lopukhin is a good foil for Teach's excesses and, as a character, a more complex statement of the play's problem. For Lopukhin is bookish, at least somewhat well-meaning, and conveys a kind of bemused innocence. Despite these qualities, his conversation and action are no more to the purpose than Teach's.

Michael Lojkovic's Bobby is self-effacing, a ghost of a person without the energy to grow, and as such is another kind of comment on life in a narrow world with few possibilities and no clear paths of value or action.

American Buffalo is directed with relentless intensity by Conrad Selvig and ably produced. Selvig's set makes SRO's small stage look spacious, and the closeness of the audience to the action heats up the action level even more. It is tempting to call American Buffalo repellent because it is really tough on the nerve-endings to witness so much unrelieved negative emotion, but American Buffalo is a challenging piece of theater that will leave you with some hard thoughts on the nature of communication and make you take a hard look at your own outworn values.

Alternative to Violence group sets drop-in hours

Monterey County Men's Alternatives to Violence is a local group of men working together to provide information and support for other men who want to address the issue of violence in their lives.

Working as nonprofessional peer counselors, they facilitate weekly drop-in groups in Monterey on Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. and in Salinas on Fridays from 7 to 9 p.m. More facilitators are needed to help with these drop-in groups, or to help with related volunteer activities, because of the large number of men showing up for many of these drop-in meetings.

Men's Alternatives to Violence invites interested persons to attend its forthcoming peer counselor training:

- If you are a man interested in understanding how men have learned to use violence to solve problems,
- If you would consider volunteering time and energy helping other men learn alternatives to abusive behavior, and
- If you are interested in joining a community-based effort in which men support each other for change.

The training consists of seven evening sessions beginning June 24 and ending July 19. Training locations will alternate between Monterey and Salinas. Additional details are available from Fred Jealous at 373-7163.

Museum shows mood-evoking Barbizon artists

ARTWORK THAT reflects French and Indian influences will be highlighted through Aug. 17 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Admission is free to the museum, located at 559 Pacific St. in Monterey.

An important exhibition featuring works by the so-called Barbizon painters of France and their influence on noted American artists will be featured during the summer art festival.

The exhibit, called "The Spirit of Barbizon: France and America," will receive its first showing in Monterey before moving on to other museums throughout the country.

"For American painters, the poetic, mood-evoking work of the French Barbizon artists became by the 1870s a rich alternative," said Jo Farb Hernandez, director of the museum. "They had long grown weary of the meticulous and somewhat overworked formulas of the early 19th century American landscape painters."

The exhibition will juxtapose paintings and drawings by such French artists as Corot, Cazin, Dupre, Jacque, and Rousseau, with works by American, Barbizon-influenced artists such as Winslow Homer, George Inness, William Morris Hunt, Alexander Wyant, Carleton Wiggins, R. Swain Gifford, George H. Smillie, George Fuller, Edward M. Bannister, John Nobel Barlow, Charles H. Davis and Theodore Robinson.

The exhibition documents the mid-19th century French influence on American art through 60 works from the collection of the Rhode Island School of Design. The collection is particularly significant in that Barbizon and Barbizon-influenced works were shown and collected in Providence and southern New England as early as the 1870s.

The exhibition was organized by the Art Museum Association of America, a national organization with headquarters in San Francisco, and received financial support from the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency. An illustrated catalogue will accompany the exhibition.

The exhibition may be viewed in the museum's Work Gallery.

•

AN EXHIBITION of paintings by American artist Hubert J. Stowitts (1892-1953) entitled "The Heritage of India" will open Saturday, June 14 in the Asian Gallery of the museum.

This special event, an official program of the National Festival of India, includes 15 original paintings executed by the artist during a three-year sojourn in India in the late 1920s. The large canvases are painted in egg tempera and reveal artisans, royalty and craftsmen whom the artist feared were vanishing in the wake of industrialization of the subcontinent.

Guest Curator Anne Holliday, a Carmel-based art historian, spent several years locating the paintings in this special exhibition which will travel to the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History in the fall.

"The Heritage of India" exhibition in Monterey will mark the first time these paintings have been on public display for modern museum-goers. The pictures have been selected from among the artist's historic collection, "Vanishing India," which toured museums throughout the United States and Europe in the late 1930s.

Stowitts achieved international acclaim in the era between the two world wars, most notably as partner to America's first major ballet star, Anna Pavlova, in the Ballet Russe. Stowitts won further recognition later, as this country's most celebrated Orientalist painter.

Born on a farm in Nebraska in 1892, the artist graduated from the University of California in 1915. The Monterey exhibition will include a photo documentary detailing Stowitts' multifaceted career in the fine arts.

An illustrated catalogue will be available at the museum. The museum is open to the public Tuesday through Sunday.

AMERICAN ARTIST Albert Bierstadt's (1830-1902) Westphalian Landscape (1856), is included in the exhibition "The Spirit of Barbizon: France and America," now showing at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Walter/White Galleries show new art glass works

THE WALTER/WHITE Fine Arts Galleries are currently featuring new works by major artists in the art glass movement. This summer's display, representing more than 100 American and international artists, includes recent works by William Bernstein, Donald Carlson and Stephen Correia.

Their unique styles and high level of craftsmanship represent the diversity to be found in studio art glass in America today.

Bernstein, of Penland, North Carolina, applies colored canes of glass to the surfaces of his vessels using a torch. The figurative motifs that he creates are reminiscent of the painting of Matisse, Derain, and other "Fauvist" painters.

His goblets and vases are brightly colored and have joyful, playful qualities. Bernstein's figurative technique is extremely difficult; the critical nature of high temperatures, varying melting points, and the unreversibility of "drawing" on glass are ever-present factors during the glass-blowing process.

Donald Carlson, of northern California, produces vessels in rich red tones. A master of the chemical properties of different kinds of colored glass, Carlson creates his vases, bowls, and lamps in a unique red color that he has perfected and in which he specializes. The classic forms that he employs assume a special elegance when he introduces accents of black or white glass as a component of the piece.

Stephen Correia, of southern California, designs many kinds of glass works, combining techniques to create sculpture, vases, bowls, perfume bottles, lamps and paperweights.

Working in a range of styles, he has received special acclaim for his Art Nouveau-inspired lamps and vases, as well as sleek contemporary perfume bottles. He varies effects by etching the surfaces, cutting facets across the pieces, and iridizing layers to opulent effect.

Correia's glass works are in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York; The Corning Glass Museum, Corning, New York; and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

The Walter/White Fine Arts Galleries are located at Seventh and San Carlos, and San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth, in Carmel, and on Capitola Avenue in Capitola.

Gerald Brockhurst works shown at Iannetti gallery

PASQUALE IANNETTI Art Galleries of Carmel features an exhibition of etchings, lithographs, drawings and watercolors by Gerald L. Brockhurst. The exhibit continues through July 31.

Brockhurst was born in 1890 in Birmingham, England. His artistic development was self-patterned, chartered and actualized. From the age of 10 until his death in 1978, Brockhurst fashioned his skills via strict discipline.

Upon entering the Royal Academy School he broke the all-time English record for securing prizes set by Sir Joshua Reynolds. Among his 20 awards were the Landseer Scholarship, the Armitage Medal and the Royal Academy Gold Medal for General Excellence. In these formative years Brockhurst travelled to Paris and Milan, where he would copy the works of da Vinci, Botticelli, Renoir, Cezanne and others.

At 25 he was given his first one-man show at Chelsea, and from then on gained acclaim as an etcher. At 31 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Painters and Etchers.

In 1939 Brockhurst came to the United States, where he added lithography to his record.

For additional information about this "master of complex simplicity," contact Pasquale Iannetti Art Galleries. The Carmel location is on Sixth Avenue near Mission Street. For details, call 625-2923.

Artist Gerald Brommer set for autograph party

WATERCOLOR/ COLLAGE artist Gerald F. Brommer will visit Carmel for an autograph party and mini-preview exhibit of his artwork on Friday and Saturday, June 20 and 21.

The artist will meet the public during a special tour of 15 Carmel galleries on Friday, June 20 which will benefit the Monterey Bay Symphony. On Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m., Brommer will autograph his just-released book at the Fireside Gallery, where his work has been represented for the past 14 years.

Commissioned by Watson-Guptill, Brommer wrote Watercolor and Collage Workshop, a color illustrated hard-cover manual that offers an in-depth look at the artist, his medium and his art.

The southern California artist is credited with innovating a rice paper collage technique which he employs both as his personal technique and as an aid for teaching the elements of art to beginning as well as advanced students.

The preview of a selection of recent works heralds his solo exhibit at the Fireside Gallery scheduled to open on July 19. Titled "An Odyssey— Across the Continents," it represents Gerald F. Brommer's 14th annual exhibit with the Fireside Gallery.

The gallery is located in the Pantiles Court between Fifth and Sixth on Dolores Street, Carmel.

•

COLOR VALUE, pattern and design are important elements to artist Carolyn Lord who is currently featured in a solo exhibit at the Fireside Gallery, Carmel.

"With You in Mind" is a collection of her recent paintings which will continue in solo through July 6.

Lord's subjects range from panoramic landscapes to intimate garden scenes. Though her compositions are interpretations of realistic scenes, her artistic concerns are with form, juxtaposing relationships, contrasts and structure.

The artist's approach is non-traditional watercolor, in that she paints directly onto dry paper without sketching and leaves no part of the paper's surface uncolored. The resulting rich tapestry of darks against lights has a broad appeal.

A native of southern California, Lord received her B.A. in fine arts in 1978 at Principia College, Elsah, Ill. Her award-winning paintings have been accepted into numerous national competitions including the 1983-84 National Watercolor Society travelling exhibition.

For more information, call 624-1416.

ROBERT E. WOOD'S Sorrento-Marina Grande shows techniques that are demonstrated in Gerald Brommer's Watercolor and Collage Workshop book. The author will be on hand for autographs and a mini-preview of some of his artwork Friday and Saturday, June 20 and 21 during a special tour of 15 Carmel galleries in a benefit for the Monterey Bay Symphony. Brommer will sign his books Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Fireside Gallery.

CHRISTA'S CHALLENGE

Christa McAuliffe: teacher, astronaut, American hero. Something wonderful glowed deep within her.

She was a dreamer whose passion was to reach for the stars. Her imagination knew no boundaries.

Today, our future dreams can be found in America's classrooms. It was in the classroom that Christa taught and where she hoped her achievements would one day inspire her students to return — as teachers.

That is why the American Federation of Teachers has established a special fund entitled "Christa's Challenge."

This education and scholarship fund will help encourage more of our nation's brightest students to dedicate their lives to the challenge Christa loved most — teaching.

All contributions to this fund will go directly for scholarships and grants.

Help keep Christa's dream alive. Send your tax-deductible contribution to Christa's Challenge at the address on the coupon below.

Salinas Lincoln Mercury: There's a Jeep for everyone

Why drive a car when you can drive a Jeep? Jeep Specialist C. E. "Chuck" Leonard of Salinas Ford Lincoln-Mercury-AMC-Jeep-Renault will probably tell you there's no good reason when you consider the versatility and expert engineering in the newly designed Jeeps.

Available in a variety of models, there's a Jeep for everyone.

There's the Jeep Cherokee, named Four-Wheel Drive of the Year for two years in a row — it's the only mid-size four-wheel drive available with four doors. Billed by the Wall Street Journal as the Yuppie car of the 1980s, the two-wheel drive base unit is available for as low as $9,900 with fully-equipped models going for $18,000-$20,000.

For pickup lovers, there's the two- and four-wheel-drive Jeep Commanche, while CJ7 enthusiasts will love the new Jeep Wrangler. Wrangler, built to replace the popular CJ7, has a newly-designed interior as well as smoother, more comfortable on-road ride.

The place to buy your Jeep? Salinas Ford Lincoln-Mercury-AMC-Jeep-Renault, located at 640 Abbott St. under the giant American Flag. They've got approximately 60 on the lot, in every color, model and price range and currently, they're offering a $2,000 rebate on every Cherokee in stock.

Most important, Salinas Ford Lincoln-Mercury, in business since 1957, is a dealer with a reputation for outstanding customer service. Here you'll find a sales staff professional in attitude and appearance — they'll personally handle any problems that arise within six months following the purchase of the vehicle. Second, this dealership stands behind its product 100 percent. There's no hassles here. Maybe that's why, after just five years in the Jeep business, Salinas Ford Lincoln-Mercury sells more Jeeps in the Monterey Bay area than the other two dealers combined.

Discover for yourself the excitement of owning a Jeep. Leonard, named Salesman of the Year last year, will be happy to assist you.

If a Jeep just isn't right for you, it's a good bet Salinas Ford Lincoln-Mercury-AMC-Jeep-Renault has a car to suit you. Stop by the dealership from 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

C.E. 'CHUCK' Leonard is the Jeep specialist at Salinas Mercury, AMC Jeep, Renault, 640 Abbot St. in Salinas.

Porsche salesman scores high

Six members of Peninsula Porsche's management and sales staff recently completed comprehensive driving and education sessions which used more than half a million dollars worth of cars at Riverside International Raceway.

The training was part of a series of two-and-a-half-day conferences conducted by Porsche Cars North America, Inc., which involved more than 1,500 dealer personnel from around the nation.

Bill Reichardt, Peninsula Porsche salesman, gained recognition by posting the highest score in a Porsche Product Knowledge and History test. For this achievement, Bill received the honor of serving as a pit crew membe for the Lowenbrau Porsche 962 race team during the May 3-4 race held at Laguna Seca.

"One of the key elements of the program, called 'Caravan 2,' was the chance to compare and evaluate differences among Porsche cars and their competitors through actual driving experiences," said Randy Hart, sales manager for Peninsula Porsche. "We put cars through their paces in acceleration, emergency braking, roadability and handling, slalom and gymkhana exercises."

Included in each program were classroom sessions on subjects such as engineering and design, colors and interiors, and product positioning.

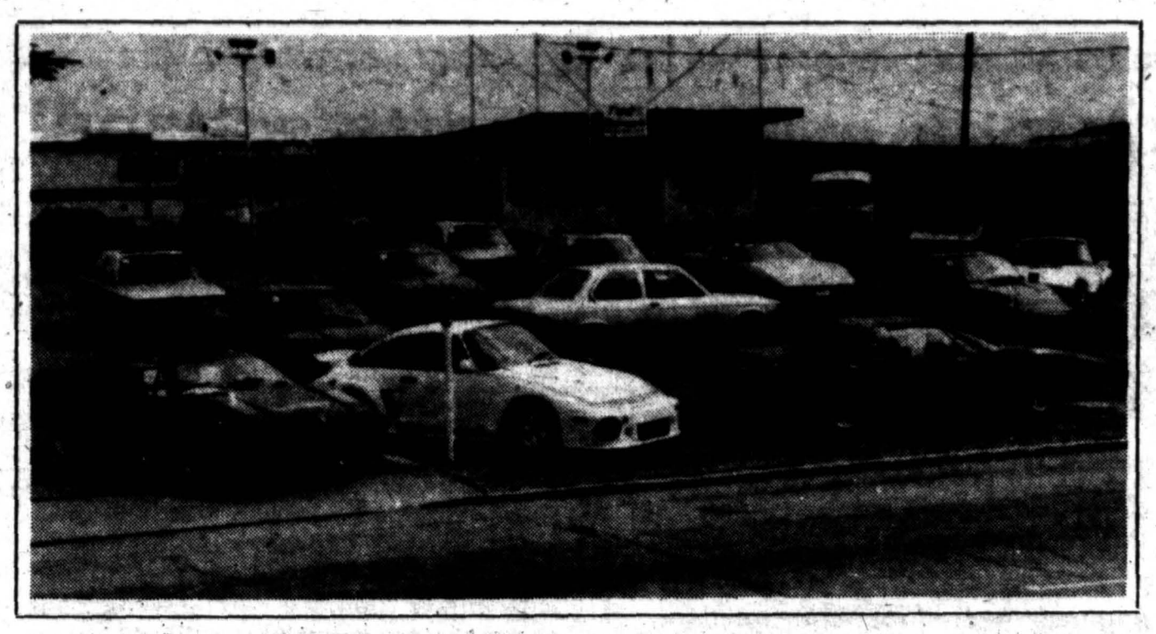
"We concentrated on Porsche product knowledge, philosophy and heritage, and customer awareness," said Randy. "The training develops greater team spirit and a higher level of motivation for Porsche and its cars.

"The primary goal behind everything we do is to make the entire Porsche ownership experience as much fun as possible and that begins with the purchase of a new car."

Cars included in the program were the Porsche 928S, 911 Turbo, 911 Carrera, 944 Turbo, 944 and 924S along with the BMW 635CSi, Chevrolet Corvette, Jaguar XJS, Mazda RX-7 GXL, Mercedes 560SL, 560SEC, 190 2.3 16-valve and Nissan 300 ZX Turbo.

Porsche Cars North America, Inc. is the authorized importer and distributor of the legendary German two-seater sport cars.

BILL REICHARDT, Peninsula Porsche salesman, gained recognition recently by posting the highest score in a Porsche Product Knowledge and History test.



TMC MOTORSPORTS, 899 Del Monte Ave. and 2200 Del Monte in Monterey, specializes in fun and exotic cars, everything from Mercedes and BMW to Ferrari and Porsche. At TMC there's literally something for everyone.

TMC can get you any car

From the practical and affordable to the fun and outrageous, TMC Motorsports can get you any car you want from anywhere in the world.

They specialize in Mercedes, BMW, Porsche, Ferrari and many other fun or exotic cars including Corvettes and Alpha Romeos. For many, a visit to TMC is like a walk through dreamland (they recently received a $90,000 Porsche), but there's also several Toyotas as well as other quality cars in the $5,000 to $10,000 range.

At TMC Motorsports there is literally something for everyone. As a new car broker, owner Tim Martin can get any make or model of car and, best of all, save you money on it. He even has enough contacts to find used models. "Even if you don't see it on the lot, we can get anything you want and you cannot beat our prices," Martin stresses.

Just like any dealer, TMC Motorsports can help with financing and provides warranties from one to three years on used cars and up to seven years on new ones. But, when it comes to sales, that's where the similarity ends.

There's no high pressure atmosphere and no sales techniques at TMC, just friendly people ready to help you get the car you want at a good price. But, no matter the price or model, every car sold at TMC is a quality automobile, Martin sees to that.

Cars aren't the only specialty at TMC Motorsports, though. They also sell motorhomes and are expanding to include sail and motor boats.

TMC Motorsports has two Monterey locations to serve you, 899 Del Monte Ave. across from Lake El Estero, and 2200 Del Monte Ave..

How to bargain for a new car

You needn't be taken for a ride when you buy a new car. To combat jacked-up prices and save your pride, here are a few suggestions from Reader's Digest:

•Know what car you want to buy — the make, size and options. Sit in a few, talk with friends, and consult consumer guides.

•Get a good idea of the car's cost. Guides on wholesale prices are available at bookstores and libraries. Pick out the options you want to purchase, and then tack on the amount over wholesale you'll be expected to pay — for American-made cars, the average is $200 to $600.

•Visit at least three dealers. Big-volume dealers often offer lower prices. If they are too far from your home, however, the expense and inconvenience of periodically driving back for servicing would outweigh any saving on the purchase price. Also consider the reputation of the dealer's service department.

•Look for specials, such as breaks on financing and option packages.

•Watch the options. Don't be talked into accessories you don't want or need. Options make up 25 to 30 percent of the list price of many U.S. cars.

•Never rush into a buy. If the salesman is too persistent, don't be ashamed to walk out.

•Shop around for financing. Banks are trying to get the business back from auto-industry finance companies and are offering low rates.

•Know your old car's worth. Watch the classifieds, and check with your banker, who keeps up-to-date guides.

•Never ask someone with a car just like yours what he paid for it. It may drive you batty.

Check list for auto trips

It's time for your family vactaion and this year, you're going to drive.

You're going to see the Arch in St. Louis, the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone Park. You've set aside two weeks for the trip and you're packed and ready to go.

But is your car ready for the long trek?

Here are some things to check:

•Make sure your fan and alternator belts are in good working order.

•Make sure your tires have plenty of tread and that the pressure has been set correctly on all four tires.

•Check your coolants and freon for your air conditioner.

•Check your motor oil.

Motor oil is one of the most important yet easily overlooked functions of your vehicle. Improperly maintained oil can mean engine trouble and that translates into an unpleasant vacation.

A look at 'Euro sports sedans'

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

So-called "Euro sports sedans" from Audi, Saab, Volvo and BMW are positioned to appeal to new car buyers in the $15,000 to $25,000 price range. But other automakers are competing for this lucrative market.

Recently, Consumer Reports engineers tested four sporty sedans from Toyota, Nissan, General Motors and Volkswagen, We'll look at the Toyota and the Nissan here.

The top-rated Toyota Cressida has rear-wheel drive with a sophisticated six-cylinder engine. Its long list of standard equipment includes automatic transmission, power steering and brakes, air conditioning and an automatic front safety-belt system.

The standard four-door costs about $16,600 but, like most Cressidas, the model tested came with some costly extras. Leather upholstery and power sunroof pushed the sticker price over $18,000. And if the U.S. dollar continues to decline, this price may well go higher.

The Cressida is an excellent car. It scored high in all key tests, and provides the luxury features and appointments you'd expect in a costly car. The ride was smooth, acceleration was brisk, and the automatic transmission shifted smoothly. Braking was faultless. You can expect about 21 miles per gallon overall.

The engineers particularly liked the front safety-belt system, which secures the passenger automatically when the door is closed and the ignition is turned on. They also liked being able to select improved acceleration or improved fuel economy at the push of a button on the transmission. Cressidas have an excellent record for reliability.

Thanks to an assortment of seat adjustments and the tilt-steering column, the driving position was nearly ideal. Front seating was very comfortable, firm and supportive. In the rear, there was lots of room for two 6-footers, but three averaged-sized men would be a little cramped.

The Nissan Maxima was the biggest seller in its class last year and features the V6 engine used in the sporty Nissan 300ZX. It comes in two versions. The SE has a five-speed manual transmission and focuses on sporty performance. The GL, which the engineers tested, has automatic transmission and puts greater emphasis on luxury. Both versions list for just over $15,000. In addition to automatic transmission, the four-door GL comes with a long list of standard equipment, including air conditioning, power steering and brakes, power windows and locks, and lots more.

The engineers judged the Maxima to be a fine car. Compared with the Toyota Cressida, it was little less precise in emergency maneuvers and delivered a somewhat harsher ride, but it compensated with a high level of luxury, and a more reasonable sticker price. In its first year, the front-wheel-drive Maxima has compiled an excellent record for reliability. Maxima has already jumped the gun on the 1987 model year with the new GXE. It's being introduced now, has only minimal changes, and should not affect this report.

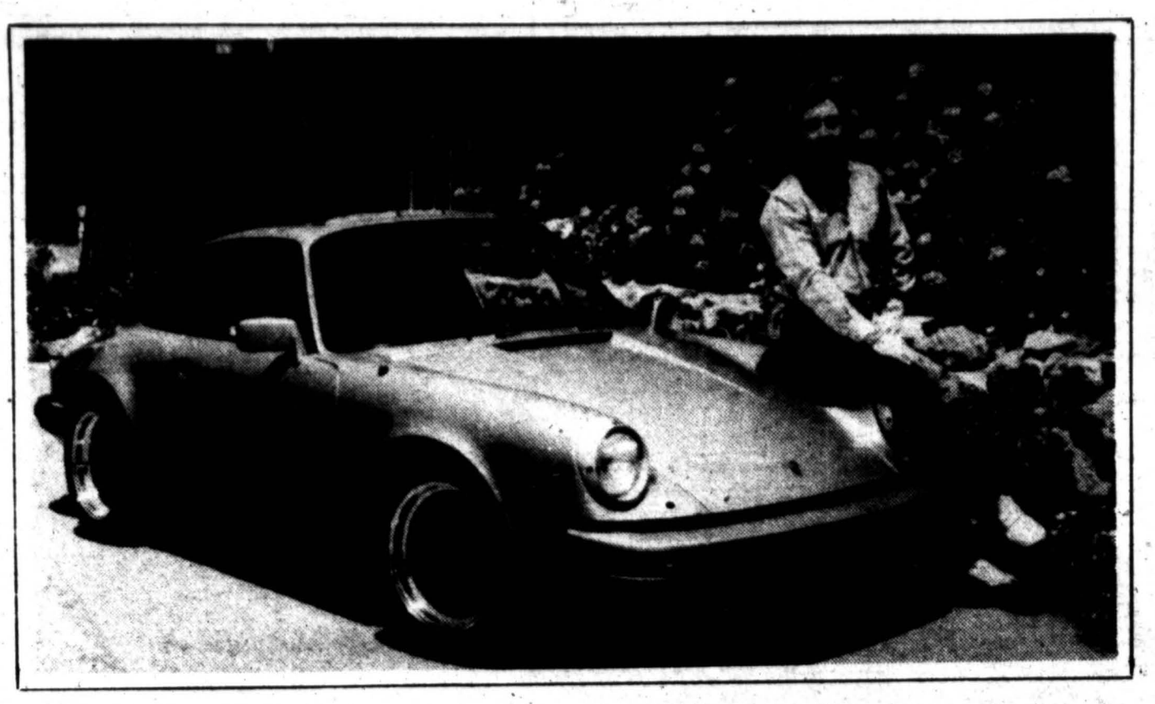
YOUR LARGEST NEW AND USED CAR INVENTORY IN THE MONTEREY BAY AREA!

1299 SOQUEL AVE. SANTA CRUZ 423-4550



THE WAXMASTER, that's what Dennis Quinn bills himself as. Working in your own driveway Quinn can restore your prized automobile to its originial beauty — inside and out — in just five to eight hours, giving it the sparkling "Concours look." To schedule Quinn call him at 624-0842.

Give your car Concours look

Have age and the elements taken their toll on your once-elegant car? With just a few hours of loving care from The Waxmaster, chances are your dull jalopy could be a showroom beauty again.

Dennis Quinn is The Waxmaster. Working right in your own driveway, he can restore your prized automobile to its original beauty in just five to eight hours. Says Quinn, "I go for the Concours look. I like to give the car back to the owner looking like it's brand new."

"I do every car as if it was my very own," says Quinn, who learned his trade while working in a Ferrarri dealership. Everything is done by hand and he guarantees his work 100 percent.

The transformation begins with a thorough washing, followed by an application of wax. Because paint chemistry varies, Quinn used a high-quality German-made wax on European cars and a fine American-made treatment on domestic makes. Finally, he applies a treatment to the rubber molding and tires to restore and protect.

Likewise, he cleans the interior of the car (he even removes dust from vents and other hard-to-reach places) and dresses the leather and vinyl to restore moisture and prevent cracking and fading.

When he's finished, Quinn goes over the entire car with the owner, explaining what he's done and giving instructions on how to maintain it.

Because salt and moisture are hard on cars, Quinn recommends that the process be repeated two to four times per year.

To schedule The Waxmaster to come to your home, call 624-0842.

Have they got deals for you!

In the market for a good used car, but don't like dealer prices? Planning to sell a car, but need help reaching potential buyers? Then you need to know about For Sale By Owner, an auto display lot at 2209 Fremont Blvd. in Seaside.

Here you'll find some 35 to 48 automobiles, each for sale by private owners. "We're not a dealership and not a car lot in the traditional sense, but an auto display lot," explains manager Richard Maharay.

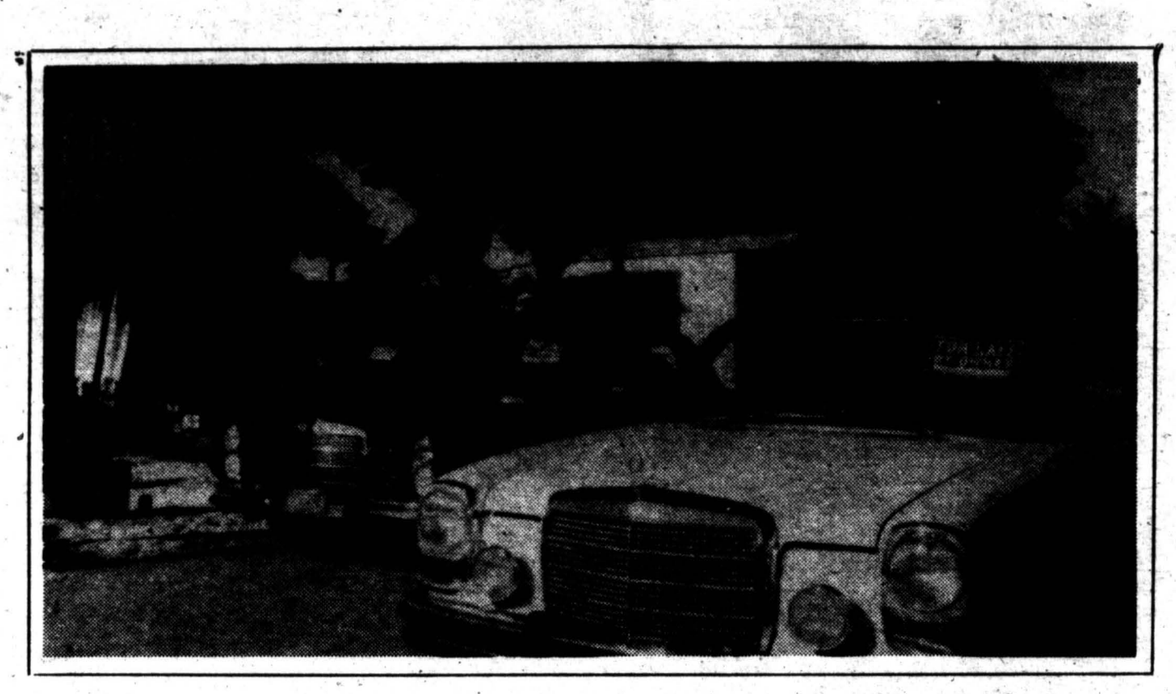
There are no commissions and the sale is strictly between the buyer and the seller. "We provide a neutral area where buyer and seller can get together," he says.

At only $125 per month, For Sale By Owner is much more than just a place to park your car. Advertising and security are provided as well as help for financing and paperwork. Maharay is on hand to take messages, answer questions, even to show the car to potential buyers, eliminating much of the hassles and headaches associated with selling a car yourself. However, the car isn't allowed to leave the lot without the owner present.

A detailing service is also available to help get your car ready for display.

"Because we receive no commission, we can afford to be impartial," Maharay explains. "We give unbiased information and there's no pressure to buy."

For Sale By Owner, located across from Long's Drug, is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and by appointment. Call 649-1474.



FOR SALE by Owner is a unique auto sales business, it offers the seller and buyer a hassle-free environment because there is no "dealer," salesman or commissions to speak of, all deals are between the owner of the car and the buyer. Advertising and security are offered for those selling, making it a quick and efficient way to sell — and buy — a car.

Sporty sedans are riding high

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Like several competing auto makers, Cadillac and Volkswagen build sports sedans for new-car buyers willing to spend $15,000 to $25,000.

Recently, Consumer Reports engineers tested various sporty sedans, including the Cadillac Cimarron and Volkswagen Quantum.

Basically one of General Motors' J-car series, the Cimarron is promoted as a performance car, with taut suspension, nimble handling and good road feel and power. Last year GM added an optional V6 engine to provide the power previously promised in the promotion.

The car has also been restyled to make it look more distinctive.

A long list of standard equipment includes a 2.0-liter Four, power steering and brakes, air-conditioning, leather upholstery and a five-speed manual transmission. The standard four-door costs a bit over $13,000. But the tested model jumped to more than $16,000 with such major options as a 2.8-liter V6 with the required special suspension and an automatic transmission.

The Cimarron is in some respects the equal of the Toyota Cressida and Nissan Maxima, which were also tested. With successful negotiating, it may even be less expensive to purchase.

The engineers liked the car's handling, finding it very responsive and precise, but said the steering wheel tried to center itself when they accelerated during low-speed cornering. That once-common quirk of front-wheel-drive cars is rare today.

Under emergency conditions, the Cimarron proved responsive, precise and controllable. It remained unusually level in turns, with almost no lean, thanks to its sporty suspension.

But its engine was harsh — feeling as if it were bolted directly to the body — and its ride was stiff. Its predicted reliability — like that of other GM J-cars — is rated worse than average.

The Volkswagen Quantum, which is the most expensive VW sedan, is somewhat similar to the Audi 4000S but costs about $1,000 less.

The four-door GL model lists for about $13,600, and includes such standard equipment as a 2.2-liter Five, power steering and brakes, air-conditioning and a five-speed manual transmission. Adding such major options as automatic transmission and power sunroof brought the price to just under $15,000, lowest of the models tested.

But the Quantum was also the least luxurious. It felt very much like the lower-priced VW Jetta. And, while its ride and handling felt like a European sports car, its acceleration was noticeably slower than that of the other cars and, at 19 miles per gallon overall, it was the least fuel efficient.

Special deals at 1st Interstate

A special financing program for Mercedes and BMW purchases is just one of the reasons it makes sense to get your next automobile loan from the Carmel-by-the Sea branch of First Interstate Bank, located on the corner of Ocean and Lincoln.

Here's the deal: on new-model Mercedes and BMW, this bank will finance 80 to 90 percent for up to seven years — that's a longer term than any other institution offers, according to manager Judy Brooke.

But that's not all. On current model used Mercedes and BMWs, the bank will finance 80 percent for up to six years. Not a bad deal.

[illegible] Brooke offers up to 100 percent financing on any new car with a purchase price over $10,000, with five years to pay it off. With 20 percent down, five-year financing is even available on used cars selling for over $7,500.

Because all auto loan approval takes place in office, you'll get a quick response on your application — usually one day, provided the bank has all the information needed.

Of course all First Interstate auto loans, as well as home improvement and homeowner loans, come at very competetive terms. As an added bonus, First Interstate will give an additional one-half percent discount if the payment is automatically transfered from a First Interstate checking or savings account — it's a move that will save money and time.

At the Carmel-by-the-Sea branch, you'll not only love the loan options, but the professional, friendly service as well. It's the best staff in town, according to Brooke.

For all your banking needs, call on Brooke or Assistant Manager Steve Knight. They'll be happy to serve you.

FIRST INTERSTATE Bank in Carmel, corner of Ocean and Lincoln, is offering a special financing program for Mercedes-Benz and BMW purchases. And auto loan approval usually only takes one day at First Interstate. See Manager Judy Brooke or Assistant Manager Steve Knight for more details on these, and other, special financing offers.

Frank Conte: Cars are music to his ears

1968 was a red-letter year for Frank Conte. That's the year he opened his own business, Automotive Care by Conte, and plunged into show business, forming his band, Conte Four.

Somewhat of an odd combination, but Conte, with much hard work and little sleep, has managed to make a success of both.

A lifelong peninsula resident, his interest in both careers began at a young age. It was in fourth-grade that a teacher sparked his interest in music. Conte, who sings, plays trumpet and drums, played with the school band, then in the early 1950s went on to perform in a big band — until the Korean War interrupted his budding career.

But things took off again when Conte formed his band, with wife, Shirleymae, working as the booking agent. In the past 18 years, they've travelled all over the world, produced several albums, have worked with the Star Trek people, and appeared on the Lawrence Welk Show, Circus Circus, at Harry's Hotel as well as The Sahara in Lake Tahoe, just to name a few.

Lately the band, still comprised of the original members, has kept busy doing casual shows at The Beach Club, Del Monte Lodge and at weddings and private parties. Recently the Conte Four entertained Clint Eastwood and his campaign committee, where Conte even managed to get Eastwood to blow a few notes on Conte's trumpet.

While the Conte Four gained popularity and notoriety, Conte's "day" career also steadily expanded.

Conte, who has always had an interest in and worked on cars, began his auto career by opening a paint and body shop. What began as a one-man show has grown into the largest full-service auto care center in Monterey County. Five years ago the shop expanded to include mechanical repairs, then in 1984 Conte purchased Monterey Garage. "We can do anything pertaining to auto care including motorhomes and trucks," he says.

Auto Care by Conte and Monterey Garage have expanded one other way too. It's become a family operation with three of the Conte's four children involved in the business.

The shop, located on the corner of Washington & Franklin streets in Monterey, is open 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. Towing is available 24 hours a day.

FRANK CONTE, leader of Conte Four band, not only sings, plays tumpet and drums, but is owner of one of the largest full-service auto care centers in Monterey County: Monterey County Garage and Auto Care by Conte. "We can do anything pertaining to auto care, including motorhomes and trucks," Conte says proudly.

At Richardson, you'll find a large selection of new trucks and cars, some 225 in all, as well as good selection of used models.

Q & A on best gas for your car

The American Petroleum Institute has published a new version of a booklet which gives answers to questions about which gasoline is best for your car. Here are some of the questions and answers:

Q. What kind of gasoline should I use in my car?

A. Use the recommendation in your car owner's manual as a starting point for selecting the proper gasoline. If you notice engine knock over an extended time and your engine is adjusted correctly, try a higher octane gasoline. Do not use leaded gasoline if your car has a catalytic converter or if the manufacturer has stated that the car requires unleaded gasoline for another reason.

Q. What is octane?

A. Octane numbers measure a gasoline's ability to resist knock. Knock is sharp metallic noise that results from uncontrolled combustion. Knocking that is just loud enough for you to hear may bother you, but it rarely causes engine damage. Loud knocking over an extended time may damage pistons and other engine parts. If you notice heavy knocking, you should use a higher octane gasoline or have your engine's spark timing adjusted to reduce or eliminate the knock.

In most vehicles, no benefit is gained from using gasoline that has a higher octane number than is needed to prevent knock. However, in vehicles equipped with a knock sensor, a higher octane gasoline may improve performance. Using a higher octane gasoline than is needed to prevent knock can also help prevent engine run-on, or dieseling, which is usually caused by piston-head and combustion-chamber deposits that result from incomplete burning of the fuel.

Q. What determines my car's octane requirements?

A. Your car's octane requirements are mainly determined by its basic design. In addition, manufacturing tolerances influence the octane requirements of new cars. For this reason, the octane requirements of different cars of the same make and model may vary by as much as 10 numbers. As a new car is driven, its octane requirements increase because of the buildup of combustion-chamber deposits. This continues until a balance is reached. The stabilized octane requirement is usually four to six numbers higher than when the car was new.

Other factors also influence your car's knocking characteristics:

Temperature— The hotter the air or the engine coolant, the greater the octane requirement.

Altitude— The lower the height above sea level, the greater the octane requirement.

Humidity— The drier the air, the greater the octane requirement.

Your engine's spark timing— The more advanced the spark, the greater the octane requirement. Both the basic setting of the spark timing and the operation of the automatic spark-advance mechanisms are important in controlling knock.

Method of driving— Rapid acceleration and heavy loading, such as pulling a trailer or climbing a hill, may result in a greater octane requirement. Stop-and-go driving and excessive idling increase octane requirements by causing the buildup of combustion-chamber deposits.

Malfunctions of emission control systems— These can affect the octane requirement by changing the fuel-air mixture.

These factors show that no simple method can be used to determine the octane level needed by each individual car and driver. They explain why knock may sometimes develop when you are using gasoline that has previously given knock-free operation.

Q. Will the 1986 low-lead gasoline be satisfactory for my pre-1970 car?

A. The exhaust valves and valve seats of pre-1970 engines designed for leaded gasoline are generally different from those in more modern engines. In older engines, the lead in leaded gasoline forms a coating on the surface of the valve seats that reduces wear under certain conditions. However, except in rare instances, older engines can operate satisfactorily on unleaded fuels. The 1986 low-lead gasoline should adequately protect your engine.

Q. What are alcohol-blended fuels?

A. Alcohol-blended fuels are usually a mixture of gasoline and ethyl alcohol (ethanol) or methyl alcohol (methanol) combined with a cosolvent. The cosolvent helps keep the gasoline and the alcohol from separating. The term gasohol, which became popular a few years ago, refers to a mixture containing 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent ethanol. However, some alcohol-blended fuels contain other alcohols in other concentrations in both unleaded and leaded gasolines.

Copies of the gasoline booklet, known as Publication 1580, Gasoline for Your Car: Questions & Answers, Fourth edition, April 1986 (Order No. 802-15800) may be purchased for 60 cents each. To order, write to the Publications and Distribution Section, American Petroleum Institute, 1220 L Street N. W., Washington, D. C. 20005.

The American Petroleum Institute also has published a new booklet which explains the API classification symbol which appears on many cans of motor oil. Copies of this booklet, known as Publication 1511, The API Engine Oil Service Classification Symbol— What Does It Mean to the Consumer? Second Edition, April 1986 (Order No. 805-15110) may be purchased for 40 cents each from the above address. Total price for both booklets: $1.

Ten Commandments for cars

To keepeth thy car purring, thou shalt check:

1. Tire pressure weekly (often too low); look for cuts and bad wear.

2. Radiator fluid weekly, not when hot. Add if needed. Renew anti-freeze/coolant every other year.

3. Engine oil every other gasoline fill-up. Add or change as required. Car makers recommend SF-CC or SF-CD grade and viscosity, usually 5W-30. You get extra performance from modern synthetics like the Mobil 1 used by three of the four 1985 U. S. Endurance Cup champions, in cars like yours.

4. Drive belts and hoses monthly. Replace if frayed, soft or bulging.

5. Brake fluid monthly. Fill if low. Pedal firm?

6. Battery cables monthly. Wipe or wire-brush corrosion. Old-model batteries may need water.

7. Air filter monthly. Replace if dirty.

8. Transmission-fluid level monthly.

9. Windshield-wiper solvent monthly, as often as needed in bad weather. Wipe grime from blades, replace if worn.

10. Lights monthly: front (high and low beams), rear, brake, park, turn. Replace burned-out bulbs and blown fuses.

Wester VW: Why leave peninsula for a deal?

JIM WESTER, owner-operator of Wester Volkswagen-Saab, has built a fine reputation for his 26-year old family-owned business by offering customers complete service before and after the sale. It's always a friendly place to buy and service a car; there's no need to leave the peninsula to find a good deal with Wester on the job.

Finely engineered automobiles, an award- winning service department and an honest, dependable dealer are just a few reasons why you're next car should come from Wester Volkswagen-Saab.

Volkswagen and Saab are both known for superior engineering. The Volkswagen GTI has been selected as one of Motor Trend's top 10 cars for the past three years, while Saab has been billed "the most intelligent car ever built." These cars literally sell themselves in the test drive.

At Wester, located in The Auto Center in Seaside, you'll find a good selection in both makes, along with extremely competitive prices.

The idea that you have to leave the peninsula to get a good deal on a car just isn't true when it comes to this, dealership. In fact, people drive from San Jose to Seaside to buy their Volkswagen or Saab from Wester.

Stahl Motor built on excellence

Mercedes-Benz, the world's oldest automobile company, has built a reputation of excellence. Stahl Motor Company, one of the oldest Mercedes-Benz dealerships in the country, carries on that tradition.

Mercedes, celebrating it's 100th anniversary this year, really needs no introduction. These classic, yet elegant cars are known world-wide for their long-term durability. To emphasize this fact, Mercedes- Benz of North America has initiated a high- mileage awards program awarding car badges to owners reaching 125,000 miles, 312,000 miles and finally, 625,000 miles.

Likewise, Stahl Motor Company, now in its 58th year as the only authorized Merceded- Benz dealer in Monterey and San Benito counties, is an old friend too.

Founded by William Stahl in 1928, the dealership, located at 499 Fremont in Monterey, is a family- run business based on old- fashioned virtues. They're as dependable as the cars they sell.

First, you can count on Stahl Motor Company to be open every working day — they always have been, even the day the dealership burned to the ground. Second, you can count on dealing with the same people, whether it's in sales or service, year after year. "lifers," is the term Sales Manager Paul Schlatter uses to refer to himself and the other employees. Many have been with the company more than 25 years.

The dealership is open Monday through Saturday until 5 p.m. (the shop is open until noon only on Saturday).

Here you'll find a good selection of new cars in stock as well as some unbelievably fine used cars — Mercedes owners tend to treat their cars with the loving care they deserve.

Mercedes-Benz and Stahl Motor Company are both names you can trust.

STAHL MOTOR Co. is one of the oldest Mercedes-Benz dealership in the country, which is appropriate because not only is Mercedes-Benz one of the finest automobiles in the world, they are the oldest automobile company in the world. Stahl Motor Co., now in its 58th year is helping Mercedes celebrate its 100th year in the business by continuing its fine tradition of experience and dependability; it's the only authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer in Monterey and San Benito counties.

Jaguar boosts satisfaction rate

Jaguar has risen to fifth place in customer satisfaction among all makes of automobiles, according to the country's foremost automobile consumer survey firm.

The 1985 Customer Satisfaction Index (CSI), published by J.D. Power and Associates, reports that consumers now rate Jaguar second only to Mercedes-Benz among luxury makes.

In fact, Jaguar's 1985 score of 126 represented a difference of only 33 points between Jaguar and Mercedes, compared to 58 points the year before. And Jaguar is the only luxury make to improve its rating over the year before in this popular industry indes.

(The CSI focuses on after-sales levels of customer satisfaction, which is compared on an objective scale with all competitive manufacturers. The average industry score is 100.

(Survey respondents have owned their cars for 12 to 14 months. They are asked about vehicle delivery, service advisor ratings, returns due to unsatisfactory service, standards of repairs and service, parts availability, warranty evaluation, service department recommendations, same-make repurchase intent, and same-dealer repurchase intent.)

Other highlights of the 1985 CSI survey include the fact that more Jaguar owners than any other make return to a Jaguar franchise for servicing — 96 percent. Jaguar also scored second highest in four of the five service advisor ratings and first in one, promptness.

Jaguar rated similarly in same-model re-purchase intent among luxury automobiles, and in likely re-purchase from the same dealer.

That's no surprise to George Mahi, general sales manager for Monterey Jaguar, Rolls Royce, Ferrari.

"Jaguar continues to demonstrate its own increasing confidence in its products' quality and reliability by extending the service warranty," Mahi notes. "Several years ago the warranty was only one year and 12,000 miles. Then it increased to two years and 24,000 miles. This year it's been expanded to three years and 36,000 miles.

"The XJ6 has proven itself time and again in the 18 years since it was introduced. So has the XJ-S, which debuted in 1976."

Mahi notes that Jaguar continues to remain surprisingly affordable for a superior-quality luxury make. Prices have increased only 3 percent over each of the past two years, he says, compared with a pair of 5 percent hikes for Mercedes this year alone. In fact, the comparable model Mercedes costs about $10,000 more, he adds.

But money's not everything, as Road and Track observes in a 1986 review of the XJ-S, calling it the "grandest of Grand Touring cars; fast, subtle, silent and velvety."

A most distinctive auto dealership

One of the most distinctive automobile dealerships in the U.S. is located right on the Monterey Peninsula.

Monterey Jaguar, Rolls Royce, Ferrari has been a fixture in Monterey for more than 30 years.

Representing three of the finest luxury automobile manufacturers in the world, the dealership is accustomed to making people's dreams come true. Many customers live and work on the Central Coast, but the dealership's reputation is such that almost half come from outside the area — from throughout the U.S. and even Europe.

"Our clientele is extremely diversified," says general sales manager George Mahi. "It ranges from heads of corporations and entrepreneurs to movie stars and professional athletes to ranchers and retired business people.

"We feel that our customers are just as unique as our automobiles, and we go out of our way to treat them accordingly. That means exceptional courtesy and attention to individual needs in every corner of the dealership, from sales to parts and service, to the business office."

Mahi points out that not everyone can — or wants to — own a new Jaguar, Rolls Royce or Ferrari. Thus the dealership emphasizes always having a fine selection of pre-owned vehicles on hand, including many unique collectibles.

Some of these superior-quality automobiles are sold by the dealership on a consignment basis. And as part of its ongoing service to customers Monterey Jaguar, Rolls Royce, Ferrari also stands ready to appraise individuals' cars for insurance and estate valuation purposes, and to help locate hard-to-find cars.

"Our continuing commitment to excellence has been strengthened by the guiding philosophy of James Willingham, who purchased the dealership a year ago," Mahi declares. "He's operated automobile dealerships in Southern California very successfully for more than 30 years, and he's blended this professional expertise with that of our existing staff.

"The net result is simple and straightforward: Total commitment to both buyers and sellers, and conscientious follow-up afterwards."

Lowest financing rate on autos

If you're financing an automobile and you care about saving money, read on.

Monterey Federal Credit Union offers the lowest car financing rate of any bank or savings and loan on the Peninsula — that's guaranteed, and you'll get an answer on that loan application in just one working day. What more could you ask for?

For new cars, 100 percent financing is available for up to six years. On used models, the Credit Union offers between 80 and 90 percent of the blue book price with loan terms up to five years.

As an added bonus, for those who get an auto or signature loan before the end of July, Monterey Federal Credit Union will pay an extra one-half percent interest on all funds deposited in a regular savings account — that's for the entire length of the loan.

That extra half percent is on top of Monterey Federal Credit Union's already high depositer interest rates. You see, credit unions as a rule are one of the best kept secrets in the country. They provide lower loan rates, and in almost every instance, higher deposit rates.

Banking services are available as well as lower interest rates on credit cards and your money is insured up to $100,000 by the National Credit Union Administration, a government agency.

All it takes to become a member of Monterey Federal Credit Union is $25, deposited into a savings account. There are five Peninsula locations to serve you, including Pacific Grove, Fort Ord, Presidio of Monterey, one on Garden Road and another near Lake El Estero.

Let Monterey Federal Credit Union help save you money.

CSAA'S DIAGNOSTIC Van will be in Monterey from July 14 to 18 offering 60 separate checks of a car's engine and components, for all AAA members. For information call 373-3021.

Saab has record-breaking sales

Saab car dealers in the United States are celebrating 50 uninterrupted months of record-breaking sales.

They delivered 4,197 cars in May for their 50th consecutive monthly sales record. This represents an increase of 26 percent over 3,322 cars sold in May 1985 Year-to-date sales total 18,679 cars, up 19 percent over 15,742 cars sold in the same period last year.

Saab-Scania of America President Robert J. Sinclair says the string of sales records began in April 1982 when the 900 series started to "really take off." Since then, the 900 has been updated each year and annual sales increases have averaged 29 percent.

"To my knowledge," says Sinclair, "Saab dealers in the United States have set an unprecedented record in the industry."

Saab's new high-speed sedan, the 9000 Turbo, is being sold parallel to the record-setting 900 series. The 9000 is the only imported sedan rated as a "large" car by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency. 9000 sales are above target, Sinclair reports.

Saab plans on more excitement in dealer showrooms this June when a limited number of Saab 900 Turbo convertibles will be introduced.

Saab's U. S. subsidiary is targeting sales of its Swedish-made sedans to reach 45,000 in calendar 1986.

CSAA diagnosis van returns

The California State Automobile Association's Auto Diagnostic Van will be in Monterey from July 14 to July 18 offering over 60 separate checks of a car's engine and its components, an under-the-hood exam and a fuel economy test to all AAA members.

The Auto Diagnostic Van will be at the CSAA Monterey office at 53 Soledad Drive, on an appointment-only basis. Members can call 373-3021 to reserve a time for the $30 diagnosis of their car.

The CSAA Auto Diagnostic Vans will also be at CSAA office in Watsonville, July 7-11.

The CSAA auto diagnosis is unbiased, since CSAA performs no repairs or adjustments. With their car's diagnosis, each motorist receives a detailed written report, which can be taken to their own mechanic if any corrections are advised. Motorists also receive a complimentary copy of CSAA's "Car Care" booklet, for help with preventive maintenance and trouble-shooting.

The auto diagnosis uses up-to-date electronic equipment to evaluate the performance of a vehicle's engine and its components. This evaluation includes cylindar balance as well as the ignition, emission, fuel, cooling and charging systems.

Included in the "under-the-hood" portion of the auto diagnosis are checks of the batteries and cables, belt and hoses, and fluid levels. An infrared test of exhaust gases at the tailpipe provides a fuel economy evaluation.
